States' Rights To Fix Wages Denied, 5 to 4, In High Court

Labor Aroused; Move for Amendment to Constitution Gains.

Dissent by Stone Slap at Colleagues

Majority Is Biased by Personal Economic Leaning, He Says.

Digest of majority and minority rulings on Minimum Wage Law on Page 11.

The Supreme Court, in a 5-to-4 decision, held yesterday that the States have no right under the Constitution to fix minimum wages for labor. The decision was handed down in a case involving the New York law fixing minimum wages for women and minors.

Coming two weeks after the Guffey decision in which the court held that Congress had no right to fix wages of workers other than those actually engaged in transportation, the decision apparently shut the door to any form of labor legislation, Federal or State, affecting wages.

The latest decision added strength to the demand of organized labor for a constitutional amendment giving Congress regulatory powers over industry, and brought the controversy over the Supreme Court to a new high point.

In a dissenting opinion Justice Stone intimated that the majority decision was based upon "personal economic predilections."

Called Amendment Breach.

The majority opinion, written by Justice Butler, held that the fixing of minimum wages interfered with the right of contract between employe and employer and that it violated the fourteenth amendment by depriving employes of their rights without due process of law.

Joining with Justice Stone in the dissenting opinion were Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Cardozo and Brandeis. The Chief Justice filed a separate minority opinion in which the other dissenters also concurred.

In his sharply worded opinion Justice Stone declared:

"The fourteenth amendment has no more embedded in the Constitution our preference for some particular set of economic beliefs than it has adopted, in the name of liberty, the system of theology which we may happen to approve."

In another part of his dissenting opinion, Justice Stone said:

"It is difficult to imagine any grounds, other than those of our own personal economic predilections, for saying that the contract of employment is any the less an appropriate subject of legislation than are scores of others, in dealing with which this Court has held that legislatures may curtail individual freedom in the public interest."

Fixed Minimum Wages.

The New York law provided that a commission might fix minimum wages for women and for minors in specific industries. It did not apply to men. These minimum wages, the law provided, should be based upon the fair value of service and upon the cost of living. The majority decision was based largely on a District of Columbia case heard in 1923 in which the court overruled an act of Congress fixing minimum wages for women in the District. The District law, however, provided only that wages should be based on cost of living.

The New York Court of Appeals overruled the law and the Supreme Court's decision upheld the lower court. Following the reasoning of the lower court, the Supreme Court held:

"The right to make contracts about one's affairs is a part of the liberty protected by the due process clause. Within this liberty are provisions of contracts between employer and employe fixing the wages to be paid. In making contracts of employment, generally speaking, the parties have equal right to obtain from each other the best terms they can by private bargaining. Legislative abridgement of that freedom can only be justified by existence of exceptional circumstances. Freedom of contract is the general rule and restraint the exception.

Referring to the decision of the lower court, Justice Butler said:

"The decision and the reasoning upon which it rests clearly show that the State is without power by any form of legislation to prohibit, change or nullify contracts between employers and adult women workers as to the amount of wages paid."

Cites New York Statute.

Pointing out that the New York statute gave consideration to the cost of living in fixing wages, the majority opinion said, "to the extent that the sum fixed exceeds fair value of service rendered, it amounts to a compulsory exaction for the support of a partially indigent person for whose condition there rests upon the employer no particular responsibility."

In the dissenting opinion Justice

Farm Women Hear Roosevelt, Attend Party at White House

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Washington yesterday centered its attention upon thousands of farm women from almost every State in the Union and from 16 foreign nations, here to attend the conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, largest gathering of women ever to come to the Capital.

In one brief day, the first of a five-day session, the rural homemakers heard the President of the United States, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, and attended a garden party at the White House which broke all attendance records for such affairs at the Executive Mansion.

While hundreds of the more than 6,000 guests were still pushing to get into the southeast and southwest entrances of the White House grounds, President Roosevelt appeared on the south portico and told the women that the Administration is trying many new things, and for those that do not succeed "we shall seek new substitutes."

"Your task and mine," he warned the throng of farm housewives, "concerns itself not only with new problems; we are confronted with the necessity of undoing past mistakes, of restoring the former gifts of nature to their former value, and of seeing to it that harmful practices of the olden days shall not be repeated."

Praises Organization.

The Chief Executive praised the far-flung organization for its co-operation in working out the problems of rural life and said:

"People are prone to forget that by far the greater part of the world's population is actively engaged in agriculture or is directly dependent on the results of agriculture. This means that you ladies have a great responsibility and that you can raise not only the standards of agricultural life, but the standards of all life as well."

Mrs. Roosevelt, who needed three White House aids to protect her from enthusiastic handshakers milling around her at the garden party, addressed the conference at the first formal session, held in Constitution Hall shortly after noon.

After telling the audience of 4,000 —many women stayed away from the opening session but later went

Rep. Zioncheck Put in Gallinger For Sanity Test

Ordered Committed After He Disrupts Traffic, Visits White House.

Following a futile search for his missing bride, including two hurried visits to the White House and repeated attempts to obtain the arrest of Vice President Garner, Representative Marion A. Zioncheck yesterday was placed in a psychopathic ward at Gallinger Hospital.

The erstwhile Congressional playboy was ordered committed to the institution for mental observation following a quickly-called conference of city officials. Alarmed at reports Zioncheck was racing his speedster through downtown streets, Commissioner George E. Allen summoned Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, to map plans of action.

Finally Overtaken.

And while they conferred, Zioncheck, clad in a frazzled gray sweater, faded felt hat, gray trousers and tennis shoes, drove his roadster—at speeds estimated at a mile a minute—through red lights, across sidewalks and on the wrong sides of traffic-jammed streets.

He was finally overtaken at the Naval Hospital. But only after Maj. Brown issued orders to "bring him in—he is apparently a wild man." When accosted by two detectives on the Naval Hospital grounds, the Woman Is Jailed for Speeding, Fighting Police After Chase

A spectacular chase and a fight on the edge of the Potomac River yesterday culminated in the arrest of Mrs. Helen Anthony, 27, of Richmond, Va., on three charges—assault on an officer, reckless driving and disorderly conduct.

Traffic over the Highway Bridge was tied up for more than 15 minutes while Park Policeman E. S. Mast was trying to arrest the woman.

Officer Mast said he saw Mrs. Anthony speeding on Fourteenth street near Water street southwest. In the limousine with her, he said, was another woman and a man. He said he halted her, but she sped away.

He halted her again, he said, on Highway Bridge and told her to turn around and follow him to Park Police headquarters. En route, he said, she sped ahead of him and tried to get away again. He caught up with her at the Washington end of the bridge, where he told her to get out of the car.

"She ran down to the sea wall," Mast said, "and started taking things out of her pocketbook and throwing them in the water. When he tried to arrest her, she biffed me twice in the eye. Then she threw my cap in the water."

A civilian, seeing the officer in difficulty, telephoned the Metropolitan Police, and the patrol wagon from the First Precinct was sent to the scene with Policemen H. H. Wilson and W. E. Williams.

"I want to get back to my children," she cried.

Policeman Mast said that Mrs. Anthony fought him and Officer Wilson all the way from the bridge to the Woman's Bureau, Fifth and M streets northwest. There she was charged and placed in a cell. Her companions were not arrested.

Mrs. Anthony threw the keys to her automobile into the river, and as a result a truck had to be used to haul her automobile away from the bridge.

China Seethes As Japan Pours Men Into North

Sterner Stand Likely as Tension Keeps Pace With Invasion.

By the Associated Press.

Spurred by officers of the Twenty-ninth Route Army, defenders of Great Wall passes during the Japanese invasion of 1933, the leader of the Hopei-Chahar military council was believed ready to adopt a sterner stand against the armed expansion of Nippon.

This was the reported decision of Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, following lengthy conferences in Peiping. Gen. Sung became head of the semiautonomous council for the two great northern provinces six months ago.

Students Declare Strike.

Students in both Peiping and Tientsin, declaring a three-day strike, forced suspension of public and private schools and colleges. Young members of the National Salvation Association met in convention to weigh their action in the face of heavy Japanese troop reinforcements for north China garrisons, bringing the total of Japanese soldiers in the area to an estimated 10,000 or more.

Japan's soldiers rushed competion of new barracks for 800 men at Fengtai, communications center, 10 miles southwest of Peiping. There were rumors of contemplated Japanese outposts at Chunghsintien to provide even more complete control of the rail lines below Peiping.

All the highest Japanese officers on the mainland converged on Tientsin to consider last week's mysterious railroad bombings, which menaced Japanese troop trains. New and drastic demands on China, perhaps even greater Japanese military occupation, were feared by the Chinese.

Great Britain Accused.

A Japanese official at Peiping said it was "clear to the Japanese Embassy" that the soldier, Kisaku Sasaki, was killed "by a foreign soldier wearing a British uniform." The British Embassy said it was "investigating." Sasaki was injured fatally in a fight May 26.

Shepard Witness Is Judged Insane

San Antonio, Tex., June 1 (AP).—Grace Brandon, 30, Brooks Field stenographer, and star witness in two poison murder trials of Maj. Charles A. Shepard, was found of unsound mind by a jury in Lunacy Court here today. She was ordered committed to the San Antonio State Hospital.

Belief that "this condition" was due in part to the attendant publicity of the Shepard trials was expressed on the witness stand by Dr. T. N. Christian, assistant health officer.

Shepard was convicted at one trial and acquitted at a later one of a charge that he poisoned his wife in order to be able to marry Miss Brandon.

Her application for the right to carry a pistol, saying she had received death threats, resulted in the sanity hearing.

By Felix Morley.

Aboard the Queen Mary at New York, June 1.—England's newest challenge to transatlantic supremacy—the Queen Mary—completed her maiden crossing today within a fraction of an hour of the record speed of the French liner Normandie on her first trip to New York.

Disappointment and bewilderment were apparent among the liner's 1,800 passengers when it was announced this morning that she had failed by 42 minutes to beat the Normandie's record.

Regrets of this failure, however, were somewhat obliterated by the generosity of New York's spectacular reception, far surpassing the send-off at Southampton last Wednesday.

Speed Cut Sharply.

Until daylight, when speed was sharply reduced, it was believed by many passengers that the blue ribbon of the Atlantic would pass to the Cunard Line by a very small margin as a result of its flagship's maiden voyage.

The reason for the slackening of speed at the eleventh hour, it was said, was simply the emphasis on rigid schedule the company insisted upon for the Queen Mary. Company officials said the probable explanation was that rather than break the record by a very few minutes Commodore Britten decided to let that slide this trip.

"We have the record in the bag any time we get instructions to step out," Commodore Britten said.

But that will not be until the great liner has emphasized its ability to complete a 4½-day schedule regardless of wind and weather.

Ship Nearly on Time.

The Queen Mary was due at Quarantine at 9 a. m. At 9:03 a. m. her anchor rattled to the bottom. She was due to dock at 4 p. m. At 4:02 p. m. the gangplank was shoved out onto the new Cunard pier.

Throughout the voyage, there has been a persistent report of a secret agreement between the Cunard line and the builders not to recapture the record until the Queen Mary's engine had been broken in and until several new super-speed devices have been thoroughly tested.

The existence of any such agreement was categorically denied to me today by S. J. Pigott, managing

Rebel Soldiers Trap President Of Nicaragua

By the Associated Press.

Managua, Nicaragua, June 1.—The President of Nicaragua and a few loyal followers, hemmed about by a ring of rebel machineguns and troops, were trapped tonight in the new presidential palace overlooking the city.

Relative quiet today followed an attack on the palace yesterday by revolting troops of the national guard (the regular army).

The number of persons slain and wounded remained undetermined. Several citizens were killed on the streets by stray bullets in the attempts to dislodge President Juan B. Sacasa, former minister to Washington.

Citizens of the United States were warned by Boaz W. Long, United States Minister, to seek a place of safety until the trouble is over.

Three or four persons defending the palace have been killed and several others were wounded, it was learned. President Sacasa was said by an authoritative source to be uninjured and "quite calm."

Members of the Diplomatic Corps met today. It was understood the diplomats are trying to effect an armistice between the rebels and the President.

Col. Reyes, commanding the national army forces in Camp De Marte, a military encampment between Managua and the presidential palace, said he would guarantee safety for non-combatants.

Hoffman Ousts Col. Schwarzkopf

Trenton, N. J., June 1 (AP).—William S. Conklin, press aid to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, announced tonight the Governor had named Col. Mark O. Kimberling to succeed Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf as superintendent of State police.

Conklin made the announcement immediately after the Governor's secretary, William La Gay, carried several appointments to the Senate for confirmation. La Gay declined to say what they included and Conklin made the announcement that Col. Schwarzkopf, who directed the State police investigation of the Lindbergh kidnap-murder, would not be reappointed.

Col. Kimberling, State prison warden, was mentioned for the position after Gov. Hoffman criticized the State police handling of the Lindbergh case and initiated his own inquiry.

$1,425,000,000 For Relief Voted By Senate, 62-14

Move to Let States Control Fund Loses; PWA Grants Up to 45% Approved; Bill Now Goes to Conference.

By Felix Bruner.

Overriding minority opposition, the Senate last night passed the deficiency appropriation bill carrying $1,425,000,000 to be spent by President Roosevelt for work relief. The vote was 62 to 14.

The measure, which will rank among the largest appropriations bills ever passed by Congress, carries a total of more than $2,370,000,000. Because the relief section is radically different from that passed by the House, the bill must be ironed out in conference before it goes to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature.

The action leaves only one "must" measure to be disposed of before adjournment, the tax bill, consideration of which will begin today.

The Republican substitute for the relief section of the deficiency bill was voted down in short order after it was proposed by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan. The Vandenberg proposal was that administration of relief be turned back to the States, with Federal money allotted to the States. It was defeated, 57 to 14.

Controlled By President.

As the measure now stands, all of the relief appropriation will be turned over to President Roosevelt with the purposes for which it will be used loosely designated. Under the terms of the bill both the Public Works Administration, headed by Secretary Ickes, and the Resettlement Administration, headed by Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, will survive.

The Public Works Administration is authorized to use $300,000,000, which it now has available for loans in a revolving fund, for direct grants to States and municipalities for non-Federal building projects. The proportion of grants to the total cost of the projects was increased, through an amendment introduced by Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, from 30 per cent to 45 per cent. The increase was demanded by municipal officials who insisted that their financing contemplated 45 per cent grants by the Government.

The functions of the Resettlement Administration are expected to be considerably curtailed. The only appropriation specifically earmarked for the work of the Tugwell organization is $85,500,000, which may be used for rural rehabilitation and loans and grants to farmers. President Roosevelt, however, will have considerable leeway in distributing the funds.

PWA Out of House Bill.

The bill as passed by the House had provided that all of the relief appropriation should be turned over to the Works Progress Administration, headed by Harry L. Hopkins. The House bill made no provision for the Public Works Administration.

Another additional feature of the Senate bill is a provision for appointment by the President of a commission of three engineers to study the Florida ship canal and to report by July 20. If the report is favorable, the President may allot $10,000,000 of relief funds to finance work on the canal. A total of $5,400,000 already has been spent on the project. The bill contains no provision for the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project in Maine.

Among other large appropriations contained in the deficiency bill are: $400,000 for the telephone and telegraph investigation by the Federal Communications Commission, $1,367,000 for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, $458,631,860 for the Social Security Board, $45,000,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority, $972,966 for the District of Columbia (plus authorization for the Alley Dwelling Authority to spend $300,000 previously available), $2,075,890 for the National Park Service, $2,388,201 for the Interior Department, $1,176,604 for the Department of Justice, $2,252,345 for the Navy Department, $40,700,750 for the Postoffice Department, $338,477,462 for the Treasury Department and $12,380,000 for the War Department.

Numerous Amendments.

Added to the relief section was an

Shorn Tax Bill To Run Gamut In Senate Today

Two-Day Battle Expected as Committee Yields Battered Measure.

By Sidney Olson.

Spurring on toward adjournment by June 8, the Senate Finance Committee shoved the battered tax bill out last night for Senate consideration today, despite an uncompromisingly acid minority report by Senators Hugo Black (Democrat), Alabama, and Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin.

The Black-La Follette blast, declaring the present system of taxation constitutes the "most stupendous tax avoidance in our history," said the committee's bill "does not lessen the unjust result of this evil practice. On the contrary, it exaggerates the injustice."

Hewing close to the President's wishes for taxation, and stressing that "90 per cent of all corporate business in the United States is done by 10 per cent of the corporations," the minority report asserted:

"It (the present bill) strikes a wholly unnecessary and deadly blow at many of the 90 per cent of small corporate structures now struggling to compete with the larger corporations so well manned with funds often selfishly withheld from their small stockholders."

Bill Comes Up Today.

The bill that came out of the battle-strewn committee room will be flung into the arena today before the Senate gladiators, in as odd a legislative line-up as the session has produced. Indicative of the spread of the possibilities were the following developments yesterday:

Senator Charles L. McNary (Republican), Oregon, minority leader, called Republicans to a conference this morning to decide the party's position on the bill.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, said he also would file a minority report.

Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, announced he would head a filibuster with "a group" of Senators if the tax bill that ultimately is worked out in conference with the House retains substantially the House bill's plan.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, acting committee chairman, filed a "dummy" majority report to meet the requirement that a report must be filed the day before a measure is considered on the floor.

Factors Emphasized.

In the background were several highly important factors. These included the thus-far-unrelenting White House pressure for high levies on undistributed corporate earnings, which the present Senate bill has altered materially; the last-minute adjournment hysteria, which might damage the plan of Vice President Garner to have the Senate pass its bill swiftly and then iron out differences with the House in conference, and the many widely differing viewpoints of the Senators, difficult to reconcile in the present controversial atmosphere, when speed is the watchword.

The committee's 293-page tax bill, a patchwork of assorted type faces, with the present law and the House bill set in Roman type, amended portions crossed out with black lines, and the Senate additions set in italic type, was a dizzyingly com-

Gambling Is Fun, Rules Court, Refusing Tax Refund on Loss

By the Associated Press.

The United States Court of Claims yesterday dismissed a wealthy Southern expatriate's suit for a refund of taxes paid on gambling losses in France, ruling that he had played not for profit, but for fun.

In seeking a refund of $8,396 on losses of $41,980 sustained playing hemin de fer at Cannes and Deauville, J. B. Whitehead, member of an Atlanta family, and who since has died, testified he gambled to win money to meet increasing expenses, "including alimony to two wives and a pending breach of promise suit for half a million dollars.

The court's decision described Whitehead as "an individual who had inherited a great fortune who had never earned any money, except for a short time when he was in the Navy in the World War." It added that he "led a life of leisure as a so-called sportsman" in Paris from 1921 until 1935.

During those 14 years, the court found, he had spent six weeks each season at Cannes and Deauville, and while "not a professional gambler" frequently had "indulged in that alluring pastime, but was never a winner when he left the casino."

"The decedent (Whitehead) had made a study of the game and knew that the odds were against him, but he pitted his luck against the odds and lost," the decision read.

Whitehead's testimony that he had played for a profit to meet mounting expenses "in a game where he had consistently lost for years and realized the odds were against him," the court's decision declared, "overtaxes our credulity and stretches credence to the breaking point. * * *

Early Iowa Vote Puts Dickinson, Herring Ahead

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 1.—Senator Lester J. Dickinson, New Deal critic, took a substantial lead over his five opponents for the Iowa Republican Senatorial nomination tonight on the basis of increasing unofficial returns.

Dickinson polled a total of 5,046 votes in 129 of the State's 2,442 precincts. Smith W. Brookhart, a former United States Senator, was second with 2,859 votes.

Others Scattered.

Edwin C. Manning, Ottumwa's three-time mayor, had 1,586 votes; Guy Linville, Cedar Rapids attorney, 1,213, Norman T. Baker, Muscatine, 1,085 and George C. Chaney, Des Moines lecturer, 569.

The 129 precincts gave Herring 2,488 to Utterback's 2,786. Samuel D. Whiting, Iowa City, trailed with 750.

Two Are Unopposed.

With the exception of Representative Utterback, all the State's nine Representatives sought renomination. Representatives Guy Gillette, Democrat, and Fred C. Gilchrist, Republican, won their respective nominations without opposition.

The primary marked the emergence of the Farmer-Labor Party as a recognized Iowa political party. The vote received by its candidates two years ago entitled it to enter the primary field this year for the first time. Most of its candidates were unopposed, however.

In the last primary election, in 1934, Republican candidates for the top place on the ticket polled a total of 341,457, and Democratic candidates for nomination to the same office polled 143,738.

Trains Report Heavier Traffic As Fare Is Cut

A marked increase in the passenger traffic of 23 Eastern railroads was recorded last night, after the first 24-hour period the new reduced fares had been in effect.

Up and down the Eastern seaboard more and more people were investigating the low rates, although officials said it would be several days before an accurate report on the jump in business created by the 2-cents-a-mile in coaches and 3-cents-amile in pullman and parlor cars could be made.

In Washington an extra coach was added to virtually every B. & O. train between here and New York, and in most cases between here and Pittsburgh. While the Pennsylvania put on new equipment, officials said a better indication of travel trends could be obtained after several days.

Holiday travel and homecoming visitors after the Memorial Day week-end also swelled rail traffic, according to authorities.

Fram the Manhattan offices of the New York Central came word that there has been greatly increased interest and activity in the passenger business, "but no comparable figures are available, owing to the return flow of holiday traffic."

In New York, the Nek York Central had three extra men on duty at the information booth, but made no other additions to the staff. The Pennsylvania reported 20 extra ticket sellers in three Philadelphia stations and the addition of a coach hourly to New York-Philadelphia trains.

Officials in Columbus, Ohio, reported the Union Depot had handled the largest passenger traffic in years.

Considerable increase in traffic on its trains in and out of Washington was reported by the Chesapeake & Ohio, although no definite figures were available.

"Thing of it—50 miles in fine modern coaches for $1—a thousand miles for $20," read signs in the Union Station here, the Grand Central in New York and most of the terminals throughout the East.

"We are ready to build up the service to meet the demand as we find it," stated W. B. Calloway, general passenger manager of the B. & O., only railroad not protesting the new rates ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The other 22 Eastern railways have filed suit in United States District Court in New York to have the ICC's order slashing fares cancelled.

Roosevelt Gets Great 'Break' in Supreme Court Wage Ruling; May Be Turning Point.

By Franklyn Waltman

IRRESPECTIVE of the legal merits of the opinion of the majority of the Supreme Court in declaring invalid the New York minimum wage law, that decision is one of the best political breaks which President Roosevelt and the New Deal have received in many months. Indeed, it may become the turning point in the entire controversy over the Supreme Court and the necessity for amending the Constitution.

WALTMAN

In that decision the court by a 5-to-4 decision ruled that the State Legislatures are without authority to fix minimum wages of workers in a given industry. A week ago the court ruled in the Guffey decision that the relationship between employer and employe constituted a local transaction and thus was outside of the authority of Congress and the Federal Government.

Thus who can regulate the relationship of employers and employes? As far as wages are concerned, the Supreme Court says in effect, none but the employer and the worker. Both are guaranteed the right of freedom of contract by the Constitution, asserted the court majority. Both, added the opinion, have the right to engage in bargaining to establish wages without any restraints imposed by the Government, State or Federal.

This may be good law but it is not a realistic approach to our present economic situation. As Justice Harlan Stone attested in his dissenting opinion, in recent years "we have had opportunity to learn that a wage is not always the resultant of free bargaining between employes and employes; that it may be one forced upon employes by their economic necessities and upon employers by the most ruthless of their competitors."

And Justice Stone added that the payment of insufficient wages visits its consequences on all the community and he went on to assert that "because of their nature and extent these are public problems. A generation ago they were for the individual to solve; today they are the burden of the Nation." I can perceive no more objection, on constitutional grounds, to their solution by requiring an industry to bear the subsistence cost of the labor which it employs, than to the imposition upon it of the cost of its industrial accidents."

* * *

The Supreme Court minority appears to have the best of the argument in this case. Perhaps it is presumptuous of one not a member of the bar to pass pronouncement on the declaration of five Supreme Court jurists. Nevertheless the majority opinion does not appear even to be good law.

The Supreme Court on other occasions has upheld the validity of State legislation imposing maximum working hours. What is the difference between that and imposing minimum wages, assuming there is nothing arbitrary or unreasonable about such actions?

How far does freedom of contract on the part of individuals go? Would the Supreme Court hold valid and enforceable a contract whereby a man agreed to become the slave of another for life? It certainly would not, even though at the time the contract was made the man was in full possession of his senses and willing that the agreement be made.

Strangely enough the decision is hailed with delight by the National Woman's Party because it invalidated a law which they believed placed women in industry at a disadvantage with men. But the decision goes much further than that. It rules out all legislation seeking to fix minimum wages for all persons.

If the court had invalidated the New York law on the grounds that it was arbitrary, since it placed restrictions on the employment of adult women and did not place such restrictions on the employment of adult men, it would not have been an important decision and it might well be hailed as a victory for the progressive principles of the National Woman's Party. But the court does not make that distinction.

Hereafter whenever New Dealers are taunted with trying to break down the rights of the States to manage their own affairs, the taunters will have this decision tossed in their faces, with the contention that the States have no rights to deal with pressing economic problems.

Many observers have conceded that the objectives of the Guffey coal conservation act, for instance, are laudable, but they have argued that such objectives should be reached through State compacts and not by the Federal Government seeking to grasp power denied to it by the Constitution. But what can they say now?

Consequently this last decision of the Supreme Court during this term places the whole constitutional question in a new light. And it is a light which favors the New Deal. Certainly the court can not now be accused of playing politics, even though it votes its "economic predilections," as Justice Stone asserted.

If it were playing politics, it is hardly conceivable that Justice Owen D. Roberts, mentioned now and then as a possible Presidential candidate, would perform such a disservice to his party as making this opinion possible by his vote.

Four Washington residents were taken by the Bladensburg rescue squad to Casualty Hospital early yesterday, suffering injuries suffered in an auto accident on the Baltimore boulevard at College Park, Md.

The most seriously hurt was Mrs. L. L. Bailey, 646 F street northeast, who was said to have a possibly fractured skull; Lawrence Bailey, Miss Helen Bailey and Miss Irina Schweiei, al of the F street address, suffered lacerations.

Members of the rescue squad said the auto in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a truck.

Landon Forces Open Cleveland Headquarters

Arrangements Committee Schedules Its Final Session Today.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 1.—Preparations for the Republican National Convention swung into high gear today as supporters of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, prominently mentioned for the nomination, established headquarters in a downtown hotel.

Republican leaders will confer tomorrow at a final session of the committee on arrangements. The National Committee will meet Wednesday and open hearings on contests.

John M. Hamilton, Landon campaign manager, expressed confidence on his arrival that the Kansan would receive the nomination. He said he would devote his entire time to this end.

He declined to forecast on what ballot he believed Landon would be nominated.

The National Committee faces an arduous task in preparing the convention's formal roll of delegates. Contests exist in regard to delegations from South Carolina, Tennessee, Missisippi and Louiiana, beside questions involving seats for district delegates from other States.

Hamilton said no effort would be made to seat delegates known to favor Landon where contests exist solely because of their Landon preference. He expressed doubt that support for Landon would be injected into any delegate contests.

Separate offices for the national committee were opened by a staff of workers as committee members began to arrive in the convention city.

Salina, Kans., June 1 (AP).—Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, stating he favored Senator William E. Borah for the Republican Presidential nomination, said today he would withhold his position on Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, in event of the latter's nomination, until adoption of a platform and announcement of Landon's position on controversial issues.

The issues on which he said he would desire to know Landon's stand included farm and neutrality legislation.

Urges Coalition.

New York, June 1.—The New York Herald Tribune, in a leading editorial tomorrow will propose a coalition between disgruntled Democrats and Republicans to defeat President Roosevelt in the coming Presidential elections. The newspaper urges that the Republican Vice Presidential candidate to be a Democrat "usch as Senator Byrd, former Gov. Ely, Newton D. Baker or Lewis Douglas."

The editorial is entitled "For Coalition at Cleveland." It says, in part:

"The candidates named at Cleveland next week will be candidates not only of the Republican Party, but of millions of Democrats who distrust the Roosevelt Administration.

"We ask first that a Democrat be named for the Vice Presidency . . . He should be a Democrat who has made plain his loyalty to the American system. He should have a national reputation and be of Presidential stature . . . With this nomination should go a pledge that the best ability of the country, regardless of party lines, will be united in the coming administration."

Senators Vote Money For Marine Band Trip

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the House a bill appropriating $11,500 to defray expenses of the U. S. Marine Band for appearances at the Arkansas and Texas Centennial celebrations, and the United Confederate Veterans reunion at Shreveport, La., this month.

The bill was amended so as to permit the itinerary of the band to coincide with the forthcoming visit of President Roosevelt to Little Rock and Dallas.

Cash Subscriptions 'Great Sucesse,' Declares Morgenthau.

By the Associated Press.

Closing its subscription books on the cash offering of $1,000,000,000 after they had been opened only one business day, the Treasury last night expressed complete satisfaction with the response to its bid for funds.

"The offering was a great success," Morgenthau said at a press conference. "The securities were in great demand by the ultimate investor. I am more than pleased.

He said cash subscriptions for either the $800,000,000 15-18 year 2¾ per cent bonds or the $400,000,000 of five-year 1½ per cent notes placed in the mails by midnight last night would be considered as having been entered before close of the books.

At the same time, he announced subscription books for the conversion offering would be held open until midnight tomorrow. This offering consists of $1,050,754,400 of either the bonds or notes which are being tendered in exchange for $686,616,400 of 1¼ per cent notes maturing June 15 and for $364,138,000 of 3¼ per cent notes maturing next August 1.

Morgenthau credited some of the success of the offering to the regulations promulgated with the help of the Federal Reserve System to prevent "padding" of the books, and add that these rules "proved to be both workable and acceptable," to purchasers.

The regulations, directed by Reserve banks to all banking institutions in the country, urged greater diligence on the part of banks in accepting subscriptions and requested each institution to make every effort to determine that all subscriptions were bona fide.

Yesterday's offering—2,050,754,400 in all—was the largest ever made in peace time and carried new record low rates.

The amount of the cash offering, $1,000,000,000, constitutes additional money and will swell the public debt by that amount. The debt yesterday was $31,639,000,000.

Roosevelt Kin, Reported Jilted, Ends Own Life

R. B. Delano Kills Self in Argentina; Leaves Note to D. C. Girl.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, June 1.—Robert B. Delano, a second cousin of President Roosevelt, was reported in newspaper dispatches tonight to have committed suicide at Barranqueras, in the Argentine Chaco.

The newspaper Critica stated he shot himself in the mouth with a pistol last night in his office, and died at midnight in the hospital at nearby Resistencia.

Engagement Broken.

Critica said he killed himself because his engagement to marry had been broken.

It was understood the body would be sent to Buenos Aires tomorrow for shipment to the United States.

Members of the wealthy and socially prominent Debruyn family in Buenos Aires, to whom Delano was related by marriage, said they were unable to imagine a motive for his suicide.

Robert Delano was a nephew of Warren Delano Robbins, who, as secretary of the United States embassy here a score or more years ago, married Senorita Debruyn.

Friends of Delano here said he came to Argentina February 6, 1936, after having left Harvard University to travel and get experience. They said he planned to return to college eventually.

Worked on Estate.

His Debruyn relatives, friends related, suggested he might find life on a large Argentina cattle ranch interesting, and he spent most of 1935 working on the Debruyn estate, near Vedia, in Buenos Aires Province.

Several months ago, these persons stated, he returned to Buenos Aires and got a job with the Anderson Clayton Co., which installed a large ginning plant at Barranqueras, where he went to work.

His friends said Delano appeared to be happy.

Robert Delano was the great-grandson of Warren Delano 2d, brother of Sara Roosevelt, the President's mother. The son of Warren Delano 2d was Warren Delano 3d, who had a son Lyman Delano, the father of Robert.

Court Affirms Life Sentence In Owens Case

"Cap'n" William Owens, who, as a tug boat captain plied the waters of the Potomac River for almost half a century, will have to spend the rest of his life in jail, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday in affirming the mariner's conviction on a charge of slaying pretty 14-year-old Elsie Louise Bryant.

Owens, now approaching his seventy-fifth birthday, shot and killed Miss Bryant when she spurned his attentions. Thereafter, he was sent to St. Elizabeths Hospital for the Insane, was later pronounced sane, and was placed on trial on an indictment charging him with first degree murder.

Through Attorney John P. Mullen, Owens contended the jury that tried him should have either convicted him of first degree murder, or acquitted him on the ground that he was insane when he poured a fusillade of shots into the body of Miss Bryant in July, 1931.

The appellate court disposed of that contention with the remark that the jurors were entitled to draw their own inferences from the testimony at the trial. So saying, the court closed the doors to Owens' hope of again taking his berth in one of the tugs belonging to a sand and gravel firm for which he worked.

Owens, following his conviction, was given the maximum term of life imprisonment for second degree murder.

Spain's Strikes Spread To More Than 60 Towns

Madrid, June 1 (AP).—Strikes spread to more than 60 towns tonight despite government efforts to check them.

The governor of Malaga Province announced general strikes of agricultural workers who demanded higher wages. The walkouts added to that of 40,000 building workers in the capital who peacefully quit. Gov. Ramon Navarro Vitorio issued an ultimatum to syndicalist leaders to end the general strike. The railroad between La Linea, Algeciras and Ronda was made useless by the strike.

Draper Is Renominated To Power Commission

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate the nomination of Claude L. Draper, of Wyoming, for reappointment to the Federal Power Commission for the term expiring June 22, 1941.

Arthur J. eMllott, of Kansas, was renamed for a 12-year term on the board of tax appeals.

Suspect Claims He Committed '3-X' Murders

Conscience Bothered Him, Prisoner Tells Police in New York.

By the Associated Press.

Elizabethtown, N. Y., June 1 (AP).—State police said today that they were holding a man who identified himself as Frank Engle, 30, of College Point, who claimed to have committed the "3X" murders in Queens five years ago.

Trooper Walter Blackburn, of the Elizabethtown patrol, said Engle was picked up in a garage here today on a complaint that he was "acting queerly."

Under questioning at patrol headquarters, Blackburn said, Engle revealed he was wanted in New York for the murder of a man named Mozonski five years ago.

Mozonski, Blackburn said Engle told police, was sitting in a parked car with a girl named Katherine May at 160th street and Willets boulevard, Queens, when he shot the man through the temple.

Engle told troopers he had left a paper on Mozonski bearing the "3X" symbol, Blackburn said. He told police that his conscience was bothering him.

Two New York City detectives were on their way here to question him, Blackburn said.

Engle also claimed to have murdered a man he named as Noel Cowley at Queens Village about the same time, Blackburn said, and that he had left the "3X" symbol on him also. He said a girl named Betty King was with Cowley.

Blackburn described Engle as 5 feet, 11 inches in height, weighing 125 pounds. He has light hair, brown eyes and a tattoo mark on the left forearm. The mark, Blackburn said, is one of crossed flags with the words "Ever as Friends" tottooed below it.

He was placed in the Essex County jail.

Troops Withdraw From Cotton Area

Forrest City, Ark., June 1 (AP).—Arkansas National Guardsmen marched into the east Arkansas field-hand strike area today to quell roving bands of armed pickets and quickly withdrew when the demonstrations ceased.

Twenty-five militiamen of the 153d Infantry made a brief patrol of the district after planters reported pickets were cruising the rural roads calling on cotton choppers to lay down their implements, sometimes with a show of arms.

Three Arkansas State rangers remained in the sector for emergency purposes after the guard was demobilized.

About 12 arrests were reported in St. Francis, Crittenden and across counties where the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, headquartered at Memphis, called for a general strike several weeks ago, demanding $1.50 a day for cotton choppers.

Queen Mary Passes Up Record

Pigott, an American by birth, made the maiden voyage not merely to witness the most remarkable product of his shipyard, but also to receive an honorary degree of doctor of engineering from Columbia University, his alma mater, tomorrow.

Denies Secret Agreement.

Denying any secret agreement, he said to me:

"The Queen Mary was turned over to her owner by the builder without reservations of any kind.

On the outset of the voyage, however, it was apparent that company officials had regarded the attainment of the blue ribbon as the least of their objectives for the Queen Mary. In a formal statement today, Sir Percy Bates, chairman of the company, emphasized that the Queen Mary is the smallest and the slowest ship that can be relied upon, with a sister vessel, to maintain a commercially profitable express service between New York and Southampton.

Sir Percy strongly emphasized the Queen Mary's economy of operation and absence of furious vibration as attested in her first crossing. The average speed of the entire 3,158-mile trip from Cherbourg breakwater to Ambrose lightship was 29.13 knots, or 33¼ miles an hour. This is approximately half a knot slower than the Normandie on her record crossing just a year ago.

Except for the 11 hours of heavy fog on the Grand Banks and the sharp slackening of speed early this morning, it is difficult to see how the Queen Mary could have been held back from a record transatlantic crossing, schedule or not.

As it is, she brings to port the triumph of the longest run for a nautical day ever made on the Atlantic—786 miles from noon Friday to noon Saturday.

30,000 Greet Vessel.

Police estimated the noonday crowd at the Battery at 30,000, but these, it was said, dwindled to 15,000 by the time the Queen Mary passed at 2 p. m.

At Quarantine, an official committee, headed by Samuel Seabury, boarded from a Coast Guard cutter and presented the greetings of New York's Mayor, Fiorello H. LaGuardia, to Commodore Britten.

N.Y. Court Upholds Subpenas by SEC

New York, June 1 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today ruled unanimously that the Securities and Exchange Commission has authority to subpena and examine witnesses in investigations conducted to determine whether Federal law has been violated.

The court ruled further that copies of the minutes need not be supplied witnesses or others.

Holding that such proceedings were analagous to inquiries conducted by grand juries, the court upheld the issuance of subpenas to employes of Pirnie Simmons & Co., Inc., whose summoning constituted the basis for the court's action.

The commission began investigation of that company to determine whether Federal law had been violated in connection with the sale of Dictograph stock.

Bingham Arrives On New Sea Queen

New York, June 1 (AP).—Robert W. Bingham, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, who arrived today on the Queen Mary, said he would go immediately to Washington to confer with President Roosevelt.

He added he planned to remain in America until late June, visiting his home in Louisville, Ky., after making his report to the President.

Ohio Man Kills Four Children, Wife, Then Self

Parent Threatens Two Other Offspring Before Committing Suicide.

By the Associated Press.

Dayton, Ohio, June 1. — Walter Johnson, 42, met four of his seven children as they came home from school today, took them to upstairs bedrooms and killed them near where he had choked their mother to death 48 hours earlier. Then he shot and killed himself.

Two sons escaped a similar fate by pleading for their lives. The seventh child arrived home soon after the tragedy was discovered.

Police said Johnson, who returned to work recently after a long period of unemployment, choked his wife, Louetta, 41, to death Saturday in the bedroom where she lay ill.

He forbade the children to enter their mother's bedroom, telling them she was ill. She had returned recently from a hospital.

This afternoon, as Marietta, 8; Elsie May, 10; Walter, 12, and Rose Marie, 13, came home from school their father met them at the door.

One by one he took them upstairs. He slashed the throats of the first three and choked Rose Marie to death.

When Horace, 18, and Wilbur, 16, returned they saw their father standing in the doorway, a shotgun in his hand. He said:

"I've just killed your mother, your three sisters and your brother. Do you want to live or do you want to go with them?"

The two sons, horrified, exclaimed they wanted to live. Then the father entered the house, went up stairs and killed himself, they said.

House Votes to Aid Hurricane Victims

The House late yesterday passed a bill providing compensation for widows and orphans of more than 200 World War veterans killed when a hurricane ravaged their work-relief camp on the Florida Keys last September.

The bill was approved without record vote after bitter partisan debate, enlivened by charges that efforts were made during a House committee's inquiry into the disaster to "whitewash" the Government from blame.

The bill gives the widows and orphans the same compensation as under the Federal employes' compensation act. Opponents of the bill held that they should receive full benefits of World War veteran act type. The measure also amends the veterans' compensation act to provide pensions for widows and orphans of World War veterans charged with misconduct. Heretofore they have not received benefits.

Chairman John Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, of the Veterans' Committee estimated the additional pension cost under the bill would total $300,000 annually.

Missing Youth Believed Seen At Worcester

Boy Answering Description of Banker's Son Spends Night at Mission.

By the United Press.

Worcester, Mass., June 1.—A youth answering the description of the missing William Webster Theile, 15, direct descendant of Daniel Webster and scion of a millionaire Shadow Island (N. Y.), family, spent Saturday night at Bethel Mission here and presumably is en route to Albany, N. Y., authorities disclosed late today.

The boy is sought throughout the Nation. He disappeared on May 3.

Mission authorities said the youth answering young Theile's description registered there Saturday night under the name of "Robert Burns" and paid 25 cents for his night's lodging. When he left yesterday, officials said, he said Albany was his next objective.

New York and Albany police were advised.

Youth Possesed $40.

The boy had approximately $40 in his possession and was believed to be seeking employment, possibly as a piano player, authorities said. Young Theile was said to have had about $40 when he left home.

Disappearance of the youth was reported by his multi-millionaire father, William Theile, president of the Atlantic Investing Corporation, and of the Catalin Corporation of America, both of New York.

Theile had told authorities he first believed his son was secretly working in New York.

Senior at Rye School.

He was to have completed his studies at Rye County day school this month and later was to have entered the Hoatchkiss School in Connecticut.

New York police said young Theile left no notes and did not reveal his intentions of leaving home. Meanwhile, the family has received nothing to indicate he was kidnaped.

Slender and dark, with light brown eyes and hair cut in crew fashion, the wealthy youth wore a pin-striped brown suit when last seen. He is described as 5 feet, 11 inches in height and weighing 142 pounds.

Senate Votes Inquiry On Puerto Rico Status

By the Associated Press.

An inquiry into Puerto Rican independence by a committee of 15 was voted yesterday by the Senate.

It passed and sent to the House a resolution by Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, directing the investigation.

"The Administration is anxious for a thorough investigaton," said Tydings, chairman of the Senate Territories Committee.

Dr. A. B. Hall, Brookings Aid, Dies in Capital

Noted Educator Succumbs to Long Illness; Will Be Buried in Indiana.

Arnold Bennett Hall, director of the Institute of Government Research of the Brookings Institution, died at his residence in the Dresden Apartments last night after a lingering illness. He was 54 years old.

Distinguished as an educator and a political scientist, Dr. Hall joined the staff of Brookings Institution in January, 1933. Prior to this he was president of the University of Oregon for six years, and for many years he had taught political science and law at Northwestern and Wisconsin universities.

Born in Franklin, Ind., July 22, 1881, Dr. Hall obtained his A. B. degree at Franklin College in 1904, working his way through college. He received the doctor of jurisprudence degree cum laude from the University of Chicago in 1907. He held the honorary degree of LL.D. from the University of California, the College of Puget Sound, and Franklyn College.

Reorganized University.

While president of the University of Oregon, Dr. Hall succeeded in reorganizing the university in accordance with progressive educational ideas. The development of granduate work and research activities received major emphasis. It was Dr. Hall's belief that a State university must provide the technical leadership for progress in all fields of human endeavor and that the research program of the university must tie into the real problems of the commonwealth that the university serves.

As an educator, Dr. Hall protested against what he termed the "subject matter complex" of traditional education which was concerned primarily with cramming information into the minds of the students. His conception was that there should be developed a profound sense of intellectual integrity, of objectivity, of desire to know the facts, and of sound processes of thought.

Dr. Hall advocated putting all institutions of higher learning in Oregon under a single board and the selection of a chancellor in order to co-ordinate the activities of the three normal schools, the State university and the State college in a common effort to serve the State more adequately. This policy was finally adopted.

Taught at Universities.

Dr. Hall became an assistant instructor in political science and international law at the University of Chicago in 1907 and an instructor in public law and politics at Northwestern University in 1907. In 1910, he became an instructor in political science at the University of Wisconsin, and was professor of political science and associate professor of law when he left that institution in 1926 to become president of the University of Oregon.

His general career has been primarily concerned with two things bringing scientific method to the aid of social science, and the enrichmentof human life through the intelligent direction and stimulation of the emotions, particularly those pertaining to the appreciation of beauty.

He was one of the founders of the National Conference on the Science of Politics, and for three years served as its president. The work of this conference received wide attention as a constructive effort to place the study of politics on a scientific basis. He played an important part in the organization of the Social Science Research Council, designed to promote a better integration of research among the various fields of social science. Dr. Hall was the first chairman of the council's committee on problems and and policy, and for several years was one of the three members who represented the American Political Science Association on the Council. He co-operated actively with the American Council on education and other organizations concerned with progressive social action.. For three years he was a member of the committee on policy and chairman of the sub-committee on research of the American Political Science Associatin, and served on the executive committee of the board of trustees of the Institute of Pacific Relations. He was a member of the board of trustees and a vice president of the American Federation of Arts.

Dr. Hall was the author of numerous books, including: "The Outline of International Law," "The Monroe Doctrine," "Dynamic Americanism," and "Popular Government." He belonged to numerous legal and scientific societies, the Cosmos Club of Washington, and the University Club, of Portland, Oreg. He also was a member of Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity and Phi Delta Theta.

Editor's Wife Dies

MRS. BERTHA MELLETT.

Berthe Mellett, Noted Author, Dies on Coast

Mrs. Berthe Mellett, noted author and wife of Lowell Mellett, editor of the Washington Daily News, died yesterday in a hospital in Portland, Oreg., following an operation.

She had been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Dexter Keeser, wife of the president of Reed College, Portland. Mellett, who flew to the West Coast last Friday, when his wife's condition became critical, was at her bedside with his daughter when Mrs. Mellett died.

Among the best-known novels Mrs. Mellett wrote were ::Wife to Caesar" and "The Ellington Brat." As a girl, she was in Alaska during the days of the gold rush, and it was here she acquired much material for her writings.

Mrs. Mellett, the former Berthe Knatvold, of Tacoma, Wash., and Mellett were married while he was editor of the Seattle Sun, in 1914. In Washington, her home was at 3308 N street northwest.

Surviving Mrs. Mellett are her daughter, her husband, two grandchildren and her mother, Mrs. Clara Knatvold, and a brother, Earl Knatvold, who lives in Tacoma, Wash.

Funeral services were not completed last night, but it is believed burial will be on the West Coast.

Clarence Bond, Of Laurel, is Dead

Clarence Bond, of Laurel, Md., a direct descendant of the Maryland pioneer, Peter Bond, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital following a brief illness.

A retired employe of the Navy Department, Mr. Bond was 76. He was the father of 13 children, all of whom survive. Since leaving the Government, Mr. Bond had retained an interest in Masonic affairs and the First Methodist Church of Laurel.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Turner Bond, to whom he had been married 54 years, and his children, Charles R. Bond, Turner Bond, Florence Bond, Helen Bond and Mrs. James Travers, all of Laurel; Mrs. P. R. Fuller, of Hyattsville; Mrs. Lawrence Welsh, of Laurel; Mrs. A. J. Purvis, A. M. Bond and Mrs. George R. Green, of Washington; Mrs. Spencer Windham, of Silver Spring; Mrs. Walter Bryan, of Beltsville, and John Warren Bond, of Lee Heights, Va. He also leaves 42 grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. in the Hines undertaking establishment, followed by burial on the Bond estate in Laurel.

Spencer Nutwell Dies; Transit Aid

Spencer Harrison Nutwell, street railway foreman, died Friday in the home of his daughter, 1345 Emerson street northwest, while preparing to go to his home in Hughesville, Md., for the week-end.

Mr. Nutwell was an employe of street railways in Washington for 31 years. For more than a decade he had been foreman of the Brightwood Shop.

He was born in Hughesville, Md., in 1881.

He went back three years ago to live at his old home in Hughesville with the home of an early retirement from his position as foreman.

Surviving are his wife, Pattie Joy Nutwell; two sons, Spencer J. Nutwell and Wallace, both of Hughesville.

GeorgeStarkey, National Bank President, Dies

George L. Starkey, 67, president of the National Bank of Washington and life-long District resident, died yesterday at Providence Hospital of heart disease.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. at the Central Presbyterian Church, Fifteenth and Irving streets northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Karl Corby, president of the District Bankers Association, appointed the following committee to represent the association at the funeral: Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank; George W. White, president of National Metropolitan Bank; Maurice D. Rosenberg, president of Bank of Commerce and Savings; Corcoran Thom, president and chairman of the board of American Security & Trust Co.; Victor B. Deyber, chairman of the board of Second National Bank; Frank G. Addison, jr., president of Security Savings and Commercial Bank; Joshua Evans, jr., vice president of Hamilton National Bank, and Ord Preston, president of Union Trust Co.

Mr. Starkey began his banking career as a messenger at the National Bank of Washington on December 1, 1888, at the age of 19. He was soon promoted to the post of note teller. During his long service, he held virtually every post on the banks staff. He was made president January 8, 1924.

Mr. Starkey was a member of the Washington Clearing House Association's executive committee, the Board of trade, the Columbia Historical Society and the Association of Oldest Inhabitants. He was given special commendation by the Treasury Department for his work in the Liberty Loan campaign during the World War. In 1928, after 40 years' service with the bank, he was given a gold watch by the board.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Kittie Ash Starkey his mother, Mrs. Augusta C. Starkey, and a sister, Mrs. Joseph Stephenson.

J. C. Williams Dies; Weirton President

By the Associated Press.

Steubenville, Ohio, June 1.—John C. Williams, 60, president of the Weirton Steel Co. and a pioneer in modern steel operations in the industrial upper Ohio River Valley, died today.

A heart attack caused his death at his summer lodge in Weirton, W. Va. He resided in Steubenville.

Mr. Williams had been president of the Weirton company, which he helped organize in 1905, for five years.

A native of Kidwelly, Wales, he got his start in the steel industry there and came to the United States in 1897.

He became superintendent of the Champion Iron & Steel Co. of Muskegon, Mich., but in 1903 and 1904 went with the National Steel Works at Monessen, Pa., as assistant superintendent.

A year later Mr. Williams and E. T. and E. M. Weir, brothers, founded the Phillips Sheet and Tinplate company and later purchased the plant of the Jackson Iron and Steel Works in Clarksburg, W. Va.

From that beginning, Mr. Williams and the Weir brothers expanded their interests throuhgout the upper Ohio Valley. They later brought their holdings under the name of the Weirton Steel Co.

The Weirton firm became a subsidiary of the National Steel Corporation, and when E. T. Weir was named chairman of the National, Mr. Williams succeeded him as president of the Weirton company. E. M. Weir died several years ago.

Mr. Williams is survived by his wife.

W. T. Pierson, Retired Radio Official, Is Dead

William T. Pierson, 57, composer and publisher of music and pioneer radio official in the District, died Sunday at his home, 821 Ingraham street northwest, after a lingering illness.

His health had failed since his retirement as program director of Station WMAL in March, 1933. He was program manager of the old Station WCAP from 1923 until 1926, joining WMAL in 1926.

Mr. Pierson was a past trustee of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, a member of the Rotary Club.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Sherman Pierson, well-known singer and music teacher, and a sister, Miss Violet Warren Pierson.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. at Joseph Gawler's undertaking establishment, followed by burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Morehead Dies 3 Hours After Wife's Funeral

By the Associated Press.

Salem, Va., June 1.—Dr. John Alfred Morehead, 69, former president of Roanoke College and for the last 12 years president of the Lutheran World Convention, died tonight three hours after funeral services had been held for his wife, who passed away Friday.

He left the presidency of the college here in 1919 to become a traveling representative of the National Lutheran Council in Europe. During the next four years he earned the title of "the best-known Lutheran in the world" with his work for the relief of poor Lutherans in war-torn countries and the rehabilitation of their churches.

Elected president of the world convention at Eisenach in 1923, he served continuously in that capacity through the gatherings at Copenhagen, in 1929, and at Paris last year, when he was retired and made honorary president for life.

While in Paris he was given the degree of doctor of theology by the University of the Sorbonne, where Martin Luther's works were burned publicly in 1521.

Returning to New York, where he maintained headquarters, Dr. Morehead began failing in health and came to Salem with his wife about three months ago in an effort to recuperate.

Court to Hear Edith Maxwell Appeal Today

Ruling Due in Autumn; Lawyer Retained by Post Seeks Bail.

Opening arguments in the appeal of Edith Maxwell, Wise County, Va., school teacher, convicted of killing her father with the heel of a woman's slipper, will be heard today in the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals at Wytheville.

Charles Henry Smith, Alexandria attorney, retained to defend Edith by The Washington Post, through funds donated by readers, left last night to plead for reversal of the original first degree murder verdict handed down by a jury of mountaineers in Wise last November.

Smith said he would contend that evidence submitted at Edith's trial was not sufficient to warrant a conviction of first degree murder. He said he would also point out that the jury was not instructed on any of the various degrees of murder—that first degree murder was stressed in final instructions by Judge H. A. W. Skeen.

Again Seeks Bail.

Final decision of the Appellate Court cannot be rendered until the September term, it was learned. On this basis, Smith said he would renew his plea that Edith be released on bail pending the court's ruling. If this plea is granted, the 21-year-old mountain girl may be freed immediately.

"This is our last chance," said Smith. "Either the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals will grant a new trial or the Edith Maxwell case is ended forever."

Edith was sentened to serve 25 years in jail for the murder of her father, Trigg Maxwell. She truck him with the slipper when he entered their home in a drunken rage.

Neighbors Bitter.

Since her conviction, Edith has languished in the Wise County Jail, alone and forgotten by her relatives and friends. Mountain folk are bitter toward the accused young woman.

The trouble started because she stayed out until after the 9 o'clock mountain curfew. Her father, crazed by drink, sought to whip her for the offense. Edith says she will never forget that night last July when her "pappy" staggered into their home at Pound, Va., and started abusing her.

It was when he lunged at her across the room that she grabbed the slipper and struck in self defense, she said. Trigg, stunned by the blow, slumped to the floor. He was dead a few hours later.

Subsequent developments in the case attracted Nation-wide attention. The National Women's Party came to Edith's aid and also retained an attorney. Under Virginia law women are barred from jury service. This also will be cited in the appeal.

New Cruiser's Delivery Delayed Until June 9

Quincy, Mass., June 1 (AP).—Delivery of the new 10,000-ton treaty cruiser Quincy to the Navy, scheduled for tomorrow, has been postponed until June 9, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, builders, announced today.

At the offices of the corporation it was said there was no particular reason for the delay other than that "we want to send out a ship in the best possible condition and the extra week will give us time to do that."

Mishaps on three previous occasions—fire in the cruiser's electrical control room, damage to reduction gears and a cracked stern post—have forced postponement of the delivery of the ship to the Navy.

Newspaper Guild Urges Change in Constitution

New York, June 1 (AP).—Asserting that "it is imperative for the people to amend the Constitution," the American Newspaper Guild at its third annual convention today urged a constitutional amendment "for labor's rights, civil liberties and collective bargaining."

"The greedy seizure by the Federal courts of dictatorial powers over the State and Federal governments during the past year creates an alarming threat to newspaper workers and labor benerally," the resolution said.

Church Parley Affirms Ouster Of Dr. Machen

Suspended From Ministry by Presbyterians, He Loses Appeal.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 1.—With only a few scattered negative votes, the 148th assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. dismissed today the appeals of Dr. J. Gresham Machen, of Philadelphia, Pa., and six associates from suspension from the ministry

The ministers, avowed advocates of the fundamentalist doctrine, were suspended by the church's lower courts after they refused to resign from the Independent Board of Foreign Missions, created as a rival to the officially recognized group

They appealed to the permanent judicial commission, which handed down decisions to the assembly affirming their suspension and ordering the appeals dismissed.

"Engendered Suspicion."

In addition to Dr. Machen, president of Westminster Theological Seminary and a former Princeton Theological Seminar professor, the ministers affected are the Revs. H. McAllister Griffiths, Merrill T. MacPherson, Charles J. Woodbridge, Paul Woolley and Edwin H. Rian, all of Philadelphia, and Carl McIntire, of Collingswood, N. J.

The commission held that the appellants caused dissension and strife in their presbyteries, "engendered suspicion and seriously disturbed the peace and unity of the church, spread propaganda harmful to the official board of foreign missions."

The presbyteries of the respective appellants were instructed to impose immediate sentence.

The ministers may continue to be connected with the church although their powers are greatly curtailed.

The fundamentalists-Modernist scrap began 12 years ago when a group of influencial Presbyterians met at Auburn and drafted the so-called Auburn Affirmation, which set forth doctrines which Dr. Machen and his followers said no fundamentalist could subscribe to which, they contend, are contrary to true Presbyterianism.

Issues Statement.

When the assembly refused to suspend the signers of the Auburn Affirmation from church boards and councils, Dr. Machen formed the independent misison board in protest.

The members refused to resign from the board on penalty of discipline by their Presbyteries, and were suspended in 1934.

Immediately after the assembly's action, Dr. Machen issued a statement in which he said he looks forward "with great joy and hopefulness to the continuance of the true spiritual succession of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of American, in an organization separate from the existing organization."

"It will be a small body at first," he declared, "but it will have the prayers of many Christian people throughout the world, and I believe that it will have the blessing of God."

The Philadelphia minister said he has "atall times been ready to present the evidence upon which my convictions as to the state of the church and its boards rests.

Lewis Starts Fight For Big Steel Union

By the Associated Press.

Ignoring hints of an attempt to expel him from the American Federation of Labor, John L. Lewis notified the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers yesterday that the steel industry would be organized into one big union whether the association consented or not.

This announcement was the latest development in the scrap between Lewis, as president of the United Mine Workers, and William Green, A. F. of L. president, over whether workers should be organized by crafts or by industries.

After denouncing the association, an A. F. of L. craft union affiliate, for its "policy of fluttering procrastination which is already responsible for the loss of some weeks of time and must be abandoned," Lewis yesterday agreed to discuss organization plans with an association committee tomorrow at Washington.

In a brief filed with the Board of Tax Appeals, the Government yesterday denied that Andrew W. Mellon's famous art collection is exempt from taxes as a charitable trust.

The former Secretary of the Treasury and Ambassador to the Court of St. James' has announced that he is giving his collection to the National Capital, in the hope that it will be the nucleus of a great national gallery comparable to the Louvre in Paris.

Mellon, in fighting the Government's contention that he owes $3,075,000 in back income taxes, has contended that the art collection should be exempt from taxation.

Answering this contention, the Government yesterday said that the only persons benefitting from the collection were Mellon and members of his immediate family.

"The walls of Mr. Mellon's apartment in the City of Washington appear to have been adequate for the exhibition of the paintings to Mr. Mellon, his family, and his friends," the brief said, "and it is certainly conceivable that an equally satisfatcory place for their exhibition to the epublic could have been found if there had existed a desire to further by eduactional methods 'the appreciation and love of art in the United States.'"

Mr. Mellon's collection, which includes Raphaels, Titians and other masterpieces purchased from the Russian government, now is stored in the Corcoran Art Gallery, pending the construction of a gallery here to house it.

Mr. Mellon's attorneys, headed by Frank J. Hogan, contended themselves yesterday with an 86-page reply to the 1,000-page brief filed by the Government. In a brief filed May 1, they ccarged that the Commisioner of Itnernal Revenue's statement of facts in the case was argumentative and colored in his own favor and that "very material facts have gone entirely without notice.

Flood Cuts Off Canadian Area; Residents Flee

Week of Isolation Faces North British Columbia as Waters Mount.

By the Associated Press.

Prince Rupert, B. C., June 1.—A week of isolation faced northern British Columbia residents tonight, cut off from the outside forld by the district's worse flood in 30 years.

Still rising after a sudden rampage yesterday, the Skeena and Bulkley rivers disrupted transportation and communication facilities and forced residents to abandon their homes.

While a blistering heat wave gripped the crippled district, work trans rolled out of here and Smithers, 125 miles east, with hundreds of workmen in an effort to carry temporary relief into the area.

From McBride, B. C., 60 miles west of the British Columbia-Alberta boundary, to within 20 miles of this coastal city, the debris-littered water covered lowlands. Telegraph and telephone lines were down, rail and highway bridges washed out. Wireless to Victoria and Vancouver was the only means of communication.

Inhabitants of islands in the Bulkley River between Hazelton and Smithers, and it the Skeena Rievr west of Hazelton, yesterady vacated their homes and fled to shore in canoes and rowboats.

Hazelton's power service was paralyzed when flood waters swirled into the powerhouse while residents in the lower part of the town were forced to higher ground.

Flood Toll Put at Six.

Granada, Colo., June 1 (AP).—Highway and rail traffic, delayed for hours by high waters, began moving today in the dust bowl as hundreds of workers cleaned up mud and debris left by teh Memorial Day floods which took six lives. One man was missing.

For the first time since the heavy downpour of Friday, Santa Fe Railroad trains were moving eastward out of Lamar. Flood waters in Colorado receded rapidly, but near Dodge City, Kansj., the Adkansas River flooded bottom lands.

Personalities Ruling World, Dr. Sizoo Says

Man today is pinning his faith, not on political programs, but on political personalities, Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, minister of the Collegiate Church of New York, told the graduating class of American University at commencement exercises last night.

Dr. Sizoo warned the graduates against what he sadi was a world-wide trend of hero-worship "such as Mussolini, Hitler, Lenin, Stalin and Roosevelt."

"Whether these leaders of our modern world are saviours or showmen, prophets or peddlers of nostrums, no one knows," Dr. Sizoo declared.

"But this we do know: That we are following leaders who can do something, who act, who can demonstrate results," he said.

About Roosevelt, Dr. Sizoo commented:

"It is largely so in our country. Not many people discuss intelligently the New Deal, but the man of Main Street, at least so far, stands by the President. It is not a question of policy or program, but personality."

78 Win Degrees.

Dr. Sizoo spoke for nearly an hour before degrees were awarded to 78 graduates. Bachelro of Arts degrees were awarded to 58; 10 received Master of Arts degrees; two were made Masters of Science, and eight were created Doctors of Philosophy. Seven fellowships also were awarded.

Candidates for degrees in the College of Liberal Arts were presented by Dean George B. Woods, and graduate school degrees were awarded by Dean Ernest S. Griffith.

The Rev. Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, delivered the invocation, and the Rev. Melvin E. Wheatley, pastor of Methodist Church, Elkton, Md., gave the benediction.

Dr. Sizoo, speaking on "Toward Understanding," advised the graduates to gird themselves for a coming "day when life of the world will shake at its very roots."

"So far," he said, "the leaders of the world have avoided a head-on collision. Cleverly, they have driven their high-powered cars down the streets of the world—and all has been well.

"But what will happen when brakes are needed and the brakes won't hold, or when the steering wheel jams or when they run out of gas?

"We'd Better Get Ready."

"No one knows what will happen. For that hour we had better get ready. That is your world. It is the only world you will ever know.

"A new sense of perspective and a new sense of proportion is needed today to prepare for the days to come."

Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray entertained for the graduates at his home on the campus yesterday afternoon.

The college honor prize was awarded this year to Melvin E. Wheatley, jr., of Elkton, Md. The award is made each year to the graduating student who, during his four years at the university, has made the "largest contribution to the college." Wheatley's name will be engraved on the Kinsman silver cup. He also received a $50 award.

The newly presented "achievement award" of $100 was presented for the first time to Owenita Harrah, a junior, who was married Saturday to George W. Sanderlin, who graduated from American University last year. The award will be made each year by the Alpha Chi Omega sorority to the girl who shows "outstanding achievement and personal character."

Other college prizes announced yesterday were:

Faculty prizes of $15 each for the highest scholarships of the year, Owenita Harrah Sanderlin, and William Powell.

French award to the outstanding student in French, senior class, a book "The Like of Guynemer," renowned rFench flier, given by the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs through the Embassy and the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of French—Margaret Kober.

Departmental honors, to the graduate with highest average in a major field, Haylett Shaw, in the social sciences.

In addition to Wheatley's scholarship to Boston University, others in the senior class were awarded as follows:

Edward Hopper to study at the American University Graduate School; Frank Hoadley to study English at the University of Maryland; Eugene Johnson, exchange student at Lingnan University, China.

Senior prize of $10 for the student who "attains his degree under unusually difficult conditions, fine courage, steadfast pluck, buoyant optimism and unfailing loyalty to American University," to William Sullivan.

Poetry Prize, awarded by Mary Mears Galt for Memorial Day poem, to Patricia Murphy.

History Prize, $15, by the District Chapter, D. A. R., for the best essay on American history, to Frank Donovan.

Mrs. Owenita Harrah Sanderlin, a bride of three days, received the new Alpha Chi Omega achievement award as American University held its graduation exercises last night. She is receiving the award, $100 toward her tuition next year, from Dean George B. Woods, of the College of Liberal Arts. She was married Saturday to George W. Sanderlin, a last year's graduate of the university.

Youth Murders Mother When Denied Car Use

Student Admits Slaying, Then Asks for Books to Ease Prison Term.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 1.—County detectives announced today a 16-year-old high school student admitted he killed his mother because she refused him permissio nto use the family automobile.

The officers said the boy, John L. Hanna, jr., joked with them through hours of questioning and then told them:

"Well, I'm going to jail. I want to be sure to have plenty of books with me for. I'll have a lot of time to write poetry."

Late last night, he decided to take a ride i nthe car, but his mother advised him not to go and stood in his path.

Detective Frank Ritz said the boy admitted he fired one shot. His mother, Mrs. Tressa Hanna, 42, dropped to the ground.

The detective sai dthe boy told him he bought the pistol secertly last Friday.

His father, John S. Hanna, jr., slept through the shooting. Detective iRtz said the youth dragged his mother's body into the grass near the garage, then went into the house and changed from overalls to a new suit.

He ran and walked several miles to the home of his brother, Henry, 21, and the two returned to the garage. Then they calle dthe police.

The elder Hanna, who arose to find a squad of detectives and policemen in his home, said later:

"I'll stick by the boy, of course." He asked the police to free his son to attend his mother's funeral Wednesday. Hanna added:

Bishop Speaks To Graduates At Immaculata

McNamara Deplores Lack of Spiritual Ideals in Modern Society.

One of the greatest evils confronting society today is absence of spiritual ideals, the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese, told the graduating class of Immaculata Seminary yesterday at commencement exercises.

Bishop McNamara urged the graduates to consecrate themselves to loft service and to the upbuilding of a beauty of soul "that would lead the world upward to God."

The commencement exercises were held in Immaculata Auditorium, which was crowded with relatives and friends of the graduates. Pastors of local churches and heads of a number of religious orders occupied the reserved part of the auditorium.

The college girls, robed in black caps and gowns, and the high school girls, in white caps and gowns, made a picturesque appearance as they moved through the auditorium to the stage, in single file, to the rhythm of Gounod's "Professional" and Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance."

Miss Helen Catherine Hickey, of the Junior College Class, in her address of greeting, paid tribute to the modern educational technique of the Sisters of Providence, which, she said, equipped the Immaculata graduate to take an active and efficient part in the world's progress. In four years, she announced, the order woul dcelebrate its centenary of educational work in America.

During the musical program violin features were played by Miss Gertrude Kane, Miss Elizabeth Ferzacca, Miss Ellen O'Donoghue and Miss Carol Hopkins. The harp was played by Miss Mary Winifred McGrath, and the piano by Miss Mary Alice O'Conor, Miss Betty Fitzgerald, Miss Betty Curtis, Miss Mary Lou Drennan, Miss Marie Davis and Miss Margaret Kenny.

The presentation of diplomas and degrees was made by Bishop McNamara.

Boy, 9, Lost 18 Hours in Wilds, Undaunted by His Experience

William Brandes, 9-year-old adventurer, was home safe last night after an experience which would have terrified an older person but which, to him, was more fun than fear.

Son of Dr. and Mrs. Elmer W. Brandes, 3404 Fulton street northwest, William was lost in the mountainous wilderness near Staunton, Va., from noon Sunday until 6:30 a. m. yesterday. He was found by a corps of CCC workers under the direction of Meredith Leitch, assistant forest ranger of the George Washington National Forest.

Dr. Brandes, a pathologist in the Department of Agriculture, and his son arrived home late yesterday. The latter, whose clothing was in shreds when he was found, was none the worse physically after a night in the open.

The pair left Saturday morning for some mountain climbing. William left a camp at the foot of Elliott's Knob to walk with friends to a firetower on the peak. After they had gone about half way, he was sent back and lost his way.

Scores of CCC workers and volunteers joined in the hunt over tangled brush which began at noon Sunday. The child said he fell asleep on the ground when darkness fell, resuming his aimless walking when he arose yesterday. He had nothing to eat but quenched his thrist at a mountain spring.

He said he encountered a rattlesnake and lost no time running from it.

President Is Given Bill To Raise Hoover's Pay

Congress sent to President Roosevelt yesterday a bill to raise the salary of J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, from $9,000 to $10,000 a year.

Postal Service Must Approve Bonds on Bonus

Farley Announces Plans for Redemption of Veterans Papers.

The Postal Service will be called upon to certify for redemption Adjusted Service Bonds for veterans who wish to present them for payment at the Postoffice, Postmaster General James A. Farley announced today.

Certification and payment will begin June 16, and it is the wish of Gen. Farley that unemployed veterans who are in need of cash immediately be given first consideration.

Canada Bank Control Favored by Commons

Ottawa, June 1 (AP)—A resolution favoring the government's obtaining stock control of the Bank of Canada was adopted by the House of Commons today.

Minister of Finance Dunning said the change would permit $5,100,000 capital stock of the bank to be issued and purchased by the government to give it control. A sufficient number of new directors would be appointed to give the government majority control.

The paramount duty of a central bank, Dunning said, was to control the volume of credit and currency in the best interests of the country.

New Guests.

Washington is host today to new guests. With few of the frills and furbelows which usually mark a women's assembly, the Associated Country Women of the World have met here for their third triennial convention.

From the five continents of the globe more than 6,000 delegates and members have come, surprising even themselves in their numbers. They represent hundreds of thousands of women in 30 countries who are members of rural women's organizations. Most of these trace their origin to a women's institute established in Ontario shortly before the turn of the century. The success of the Canadian women in developing their economic, social and cultural interests led others to undertake similar programs.

In 1929 these far-flung groups felt the need for a liaison agency. The idea was first discussed in Vienna, and, at a meeting in Stockholm three years ago, the organization was completed. Its principal aim was set forth as "the will to peace," with the thought that "it is not enough to be passive, just to believe in international good will . . . we must work for it actively and whole-heartedly."

Pursuing the theory that the world is best served by building up one's own country and helping others to build up theirs, the association carefully avoided all political and sectarian questions. Instead, as the reports from Ceylon and Finland, Holland and South Africa indicate, the women have concentrated largely on such homely endeavors as handicrafts, nursing and the training of young girls in domestic science. They are pre-eminently country women.

Women in cities have long been organized and their success in promoting the welfare of their communities is everywhere recognized. The A. C. W. W. represents the first considerable effort to bring to women of villages the same opportunities to wield a good influence in a world that cries for more of their steadfastness and simple devotion.

The Revamped Guffey Bill.

A new coal control bill to take the place of the invalidated Guffey act has been given right of way to the floor of the House and may possibly be rushed to passage before the end of the session. The unconstitutional labor provisions have been eliminated, but otherwise the measure follows the lines of the old act. Price fixing is retained as well as the provision for a penalty tax of 15 per cent levied upon producers who fail to become parties to the code agreement embodied in the proposed law.

Even if the revamped bill could survive a second test of constitutionality, it would be a thoroughly unacceptable means of controlling the coal industry. A good regulatory measure is greatly needed to stabilize the industry and, even more important, to prevent uneconomic exploitation of irreplaceable natural resources. But the Guffey bill would accomplish neither of these ends.

For example, the fixing of minimum prices based upon the weighted average cost of coal produced in arbitrarily defined marketing areas, is a most complicated procedure. This method would favor inefficient high-cost mines, by raising minimum sales prices. It would also tend to restrict market outlets for coal by inducing consumers to turn to competitive fuel oils, natural gas and hydro-electric power. It would not correct the evils of overdevelopment by preventing the opening of new mines, or an expansion of the capacity of existing ones.

Since the price-fixing provisions of the new bill apply only to coal entering interstate commerce or to intrastate sales which directly affect interstate commerce, great confusion would no doubt result from the efforts of large purchasers to escape regulation. Consumers would, in some cases, shift their buying, move nearer to mine sources of supply, or even purchase their own mines. Moreover, the Guffey bill would place a formidable and virtually impossible administrative task upon the commission established to give effect to the coal code.

A highly competitive industry operating several thousand mines and turning out many thousands of different grades, sizes and qualities of coal cannot be effectively controlled by a board located in Washington. The industry needs a flexible marketing system readily adjustable to rapidly changing conditions of demand and supply. It needs lower prices secured through elimination of waste and improved methods of extraction. Only by such means can the industry maintain itself in face of growing competition from rival fuels.

Voluntary agreements to regulate sales practices and eliminate destructive price cutting are not inconsistent with these aims. They can provide an efficient form of self-aid for the hard pressed coal industry. The Supreme Court has upheld such types of agreement in the Appalachian Coals case. Selling agencies of this kind, already in existence or easily organized, could do much to solve the problems of the industry without further legislation. One of the most discouraging results from enactment of the Guffey bill would be the tendency to defeat co-operative efforts of this sort.

An Unfortunate Decision.

The implications of the Supreme Court opinion invalidating New York's minimum wage law for women are far-reaching indeed. Two weeks ago the Court decided, in its opinion on the Guffey coal act, that Congress has no authority to regulate wages in "purely local" undertakings. Now, by invoking the "due process of law" clause in the fourteenth amendment, it has denied to the States even the right to prescribe minimum wages for women and children.

In the first place, the decision is weakened by the vigorous dissent of Chief Justice Hughes along with Justices Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo. Justice Stone virtually accuses the majority of injecting its own "personal economic predilections" into its opinion on a legal question. And the basis on which the decision was rendered seems to give substance to his complaint.

That phrase in the Constitution on which the opinion of the majority is based reads as follows: "Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." The majority held that the right of employes to bargain with their employer is part of the liberty so guaranteed. "Legislative abridgement of that freedom," the opinion held, "can only be justified by the existence of exceptional circumstances." But to arrive at this opinion the court was forced to read a very broad interpretation into the meaning of four words: "due process of law."

It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the Court has gone out of its way to restrict legislative powers of the State. As Justice Stone points out, a contract of employment seems to be no "less an appropriate subject of legislation than are scores of others, in dealing with which this Court has held that legislatures may curtail individual freedom in the public interest." For the Court to reject this reasoning by a bare majority of one vote, and to draw new restrictions upon the States from the uncertain meaning of the "due process" clause, seems very questionable.

Aside from its probable effect upon legislation to control minimum wages for women and minors within the States, the most important result of the decision will probably be the reaction against the Court itself. In a great majority of the opinions by which the Court has annulled New Deal statutes its action has been based upon positive and clear-cut logic deeply imbedded in the Constitution. But in this case, as well as in the decision which knocked out the municipal bankruptcy act, the majority seems to have taken its stand on much more precarious ground.

The powers of the States are not specifically limited as are those of the Federal Government. Since four of the justices could "find nothing in the Federal Constitution which denies to the State the power to protect women from being exploited by overreaching employers through the refusal of a fair wage" it does seem strange for the majority to wrench such a meaning from a vague phrase.

Such an attitude will give unfortunate encouragement to those critics of the Court who are seeking to curb its powers.

The Equal Rights Amendment.

The fact that a House sub-committee has reported favorably upon a so-called equal rights amendment to the Constitution, sponsored by the National Woman's Party, will infuse new life into a campaign that has been carried on without tangible result for many years. Representative Ludlow considers the proposed amendment a "necessary corollary and supplement of equal suffrage." Its adoption, he says, would be "the crowning act that will bring women to a status of the complete emancipation to which they are entitled by all the rules of right and justice."

If the amendment were capable of working such wonders, it would be surprising to find a valiant leader in the fight for woman suffrage, Carrie Chapman Catt, signing protests against its acceptance. It would be equally difficult to understand why women who have devoted their lives to efforts to improve working conditions and wages for their own sex are, as a rule, opposed to the "equal rights" amendment.

As a matter of fact, there is a quite simple explanation for this opposition. Those who have first hand knowledge of industrial conditions desire greater protection under the law for working women. They fear that insistence upon removal of all civil and legal disabilities would lead to elimination of much needed safeguards against exploitation.

Every fair-minded person will sympathize with the desire to remove discriminations that work hardship upon individual women. But fair treatment under the law for both sexes does not mean that all restrictive social legislation should apply equally to men and women. A great deal of our protective labor legislation might be extended with advantage to men, but there is no doubt that the need of the average woman for such protection is greater. Equality that would condemn women to oppressively long hours of work under conditions inimical to health would certainly be a dubious blessing.

Of course when protective legislation degenerates into a disguised form of discrimination against women or when women are denied equal rights, merely because of sex, remedial action should be sought. But a blanket amendment to the Constitution trying to provide safeguards against violation of the principle of equal rights by 48 States would simply create new injustices. Furthermore, it would impose an impossible task upon Congress, give rise to innumerable legal controversies, and impede rather than assist efforts to remove existing inequalities.

Japan Again On The March.

The Japan-sponsored movement for establishment in North China of a regime as completely independent of Nanking as is Manchoukuo is again showing signs of life.

Actually the plan to divorce the five provinces of Hopei, Chahar, Suiyan, Shansi and Shantung from China came within an ace of being carried out seven months ago. At that time, it was reported, some 35 Chinese civic and business organizations in North China, including the chamber of commerce and the bankers' association, had petitioned Gen. Sun Che-yuan, commander in chief of the Chinese garrisons in the Peiping-Tientsin area, and other North China military leaders to declare the five provinces independent of China.

For reasons not entirely clear the plan was not then carried out. Possibly the civil and military leaders in Tokyo were able to persuade the Japanese army heads in North China that the time was not yet ripe for such a violent assault on China's territorial integrity. It will be recalled that six months ago the League of Nations, of which China is a member, was being galvanized into action by Great Britain, and was showing unexpected strength. At the same time Japan was discovering at the London naval conference a unity of spirit on the part of Great Britain and the United States, in their common opposition to the naval demands of the island empire.

Thus the Japanese army heads in North China were forced to bide their time and be content with the establishment by Yin Ju-keng of an autonomous regime in eastern Hopei Province. But they have not let the grass grow under their feet.

In recent months the central government's authority in the region between the Yellow River and the Great Wall has dwindled to the vanishing point. With Japan's connivance, eastern Hopei has served as a smugglers' paradise, vast quantities of goods pouring in through this breach in the customs wall to the detriment of China and Western commercial interests. At the same time thousands of additional Japanese troops have poured into North China and every station along the railroad from Peiping to Shanhaikwan has been occupied.

Two very recent events have indicated that the curtain is about to go up on the last act of the drama. First, there was the bomb explosion at Tangku which the Japanese promptly declared was part of a Chinese plot against the Japanese military forces using the stretch of railroad from Tangku to Tientsin. Second, Li Ting-yu, head of the "People's Autonomous Association" and member of the Hopei-Chahar political council, demanded that Gen. Sun Cheh-yuan, the chairman of that council, forthwith declare complete autonomy for North China.

The bombing bears ominous resemblances to the alleged explosion on the South Manchuria Railroad outside of Mukden on that fateful night of September 18, 1931, which saw the beginning of the Japanese conquest of Manchuria. The demand for autonomy is obviously a repetition of the technique employed by the Japanese in Manchuria. But these tactics will fool nobody. It is plain that once again Japan is about to treat as scraps of paper its solemn pledges to respect China's territorial integrity and observe the open door.

The "Indianism" Riddle.

William Franklin Sands in the American Scholar.

To the student of political science Mexico offers a laboratory experiment of the greatest interest, conducted more visibly to us than any similar process in Europe. It differs at many points from the European processes. In Russia, in Germany, in Italy and in Turkey the word experiment connotes (at least, in some degree) a conscious, orderly synthesis for the purpose of arriving at an intended or expected result. That connotation is certainly not wholly true of Mexico. The only thing quite certain about Mexico is that there is an immense urge, an immense surging desire; a boiling and bubbling of something in the national laboratory retort—but it is not certain that the experimenters truly know what they want to achieve by what they are doing, beyond intense emphasis on recognition of something supremely "Indian" with the fullest possible outlet for some vague thing coming to be called "Indianism."

New Tools Needed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The address of Senator Borah over the radio last Thursday night was undoubtedly the greatest deliverance which the 1936 campaign has yet brought forth.

The Republican Party is 80 years old. It has had a distinguished, even a glorious career. The party which freed the slave, reunited the Nation and built up material prosperity on the basis of the protective tariff has served well in its day and generation. But a political party, like a biological organism, contains in itself the seeds of decay which will work out its dissolution in the fullness of time. The protective tariff, which it espoused, while developing the resources of the country, at the same time fostered the growth of monopoly and the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few lucky and rugged individuals.

The free flowing trade relations among the nations of the earth has outmoded high tariff walls. The inordinate concentration of wealth is an abomination in the sight of God and man. Every forward looking political and economic movement in the world today proclaims for a more equable distribution of wealth in the hands of those who make rather than those who take. The Republican Party is wedded to the idol of rugged individualism at the expense of the less fortunate man; this has become its ruling passion strong in death. If the Republican platform at Cleveland should declare against monopoly gods and men would laugh.

Whenever an organization loses the moral energy which called it into being its days are numbered and its usefulness is near an end. No vital thinker in the Nation today believes that the radical industrial readjustments which our age and civilization demand can be accomplished through the discarded implements and methods of the Republican Party. New occasions, not only teach new duties, but demand new tools and new instruments. As an effective political instrument the Republican Party has had its day.

Diagnosis Of A Little Boy's Ills

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Warburg's little boy is better, much better. A good nurse and good doctors have saved his life and, with serious necessary expense, and wise provisions for his regimen and diet, have brought him an appreciable distance toward recovery. And now there arises on all sides a class of people who assert that all he had was an accidental kind of a stomach ache, and that the old system of feeding contained no poison.

One crisis like this the country can come through, with great suffering, but if the people of America are so blind or so prejudiced that they cannot see that there was anything wrong in the old economic system of their country, nothing can save them and they are not worth saving.

There has now been about a hundred years of industrialism in the world, and the world has only begun to digest it. It is probably the undigested state of it that was basically responsible for all the horrors of this century, including the war. Evidently there must be some way to deal with it, as there has been with the various economic phases of history, but in trying to do so one is up against a class, especially in this country, who block the way to any solution because they deny there is any problem.

The full extent of the departure of this Administration from the old paths can be summed up by saying that it is trying to assure a measure of social security. Neither the Constitution nor any principle is betrayed by its so doing. On the contrary, every decent principle is violated by the lack of it. Free enterprise still exists for those for whom it has any value, but for the great majority of workers all over the world, who are employed in their thousands to work on machines or in mines in which they have no interest, and who may at any time be thrown out of employment by a stoppage of their industry for causes utterly remote from them and for no fault of theirs, no lack of ability, honesty, strength, industry, intelligence, willingness to work—in short, for lack of none of those qualities which we still believe should assure a man a living wage for himself and his family—the phrases about free enterprise and competition are a farce.

Each of those men lives under a shadow of fear, the fear of destitution for himself and his family. Perhaps in the old days, before industrialism, that fear, however ugly, was a necessary goad and incentive to make him a better worker. Those who now feel that the Constitution would be outraged by removing that fear, and its frequent realization, do little justice to the liberal and humane gentlemen who framed that document, or to the principles they stood for.

The objections to any form of economic security usually boil down to their cost. It will cost money. It is worth money. It is the only bulwark of capitalism. Capitalism is the best economic system that has been devised. It is the only feasible system. But, like all good things, you cannot have it without paying for it.

The very heart and essence of the vicious system that was poisoning Mr. Warburg's little boy was that the ruling class of America was taking all of the privileges of capitalism and none of its responsibilities.

Where new elements had entered in and tipped over the great American experiment, until it had gone quite lop-sided, it was and is necessary for the Government to step in and set it right. No one has suggested any other way to right it. Obviously the States couldn't. And by way of setting it right, this Administration has been vigorous and courageous. But in the moot point of security, for worker or for investor, they have gone only a very mild little way, an absolute minimum of the way. One often reads that England has made wonderful progress in recovery "without any New Deal." In England the New Deal is just an old deal. But it goes much further than the Rooseveltian one. In England there are unemployment insurance, health insurance, old age pensions and extensive government housing schemes, beside the dole. These are maintained and added to not by the Labor Party but by the conservative government. And English freedom and English capitalism flourish.

There, as here, there are abuses. Until human nature is perfected such instances will persist. But each such perversion of the law to benefit one undeserving loafer is a matter of small consequence in comparison with the misuse formerly made of the laxity of American laws by those employers who wanted to cheat and exploit their workers, the brokers who wanted to swindle their customers, the directors who misled their stockholders. In all classes there will be a large proportion of men and women who are more shrewd than honest, to put it no more strongly. What is scandalous is the large number of people and of papers who profess themselves shocked by every case of a man getting relief to which he is not entitled and who yet resent any mention of corruption in the employing class.

They are the same people who are now so loud about the crying scandals of Roosevelt's Administration, and who passed over the whole term of President Harding with scarcely a comment.

Mr. Warburg doesn't appreciate his little boy. That is a little boy of sound instincts. No wonder he is violently upset at the idea of going to see Annie again. Being with Annie wasn't good for him and he must never go back. Just remembering about green apples, Mr. Warburg, isn't the answer. Probably that last gorge on green apples was rather valuable as an emetic.

A Citizen's Flag.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Citizen" writing in these columns May 28 asks the question, "Is there any way of stopping this idiotic salute of the flag business?" Who wants to stop it? I was absolutely amazed and astounded to learn that there are any real true citizens in this country enjoying the fruits of liberty the United States flag insures to all alike under its folds, who objected or even questioned our American custom of respecting and honoring the Stars and Stripes on public, or semipublic occasions, and by the school children and others in their demonstrations of the flag exercise. Just what is the real significance or meaning of saluting the flag? It is, of course, nothing more nor less than a display of patriotic honor and respect for the country the flag represents, and it is an indispensable public exhibition of loyalty every nation must recognize as evidence of its authority, if it expects to command the respect and confidence of its citizens.

This correspondent states he has a "genuine love for his country and the Stars and Stripes," but wants to "emphasize his protest against saluting the flag;" in other words rebels against honoring and respecting his country. He says that he is an "American profoundly grateful that his ancestors had the good sense to come to America and build a new country * * * and that they have fine records of public service." That may be true, but he can be rest assured that his "ancestors" and their contemporaries did not share his beliefs and sentiments regarding the Stars and Stripes, or he would not now be enjoying the privileges and the liberty and freedom that flag confers.

He also says that there should be no "perfunctory lip service and ceremonial gesture of obeisance to the flag." He should know from his own observations that there is no such requirement exacted, except such as comes naturally through the normal citizen's own sense of proportion, and his inborn instinctive desire to protect the flag and defend the country of which he himself is a part of the citizenry.

Reply From Georgia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Amused's" criticism of my war debts letter of May 25 calls for a rejoinder.

Many Americans formerly afflicted with Anglomania, myself included, have recovered, but not all it seems. The English as a people are still of the best, but not Britain herself. She has not stood the acid test and has even acquired the coincidence of all our recalcitrant European debtors in this vital issue.

I am fully advised as to Canada's governmental status ough with England's connivance she were easily ours; but I seem to be a failure as a humorist, so guiltily subtle as to be misleading. However, I yield the palm for subtlety to "Amused" as it is inconceivable that anybody would attempt a serious defense of Europe's attitude toward these tremendous, fateful obligations, especially Great Britain's.

"Revolting Exhibitions."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The revolting exhibitions of Marion A. Zioncheck should be halted forthwith by placing this habitual disturber of the peace where he can indulge in his unique talents without benefit of any public chronicling.

I hope a voice will soon be raised in Congress to check Zioncheck, even as the Roman orator warned, "Cartago delenda est!" I should be grateful to see The Post adopt the same policy as in the case of the Lindberghs. This would be a boon to all self-respecting citizens who feel as I do about Zioncheck.

The Post Impressionist

Fruit-Salad, Public Enemy

Post Office, Tuesday.

THIS Columnist loathes answering questionnaires; in fact, there was a time, over in France, when classmate Gen. Marlborough Churchhill thought seriously of arrecting the Post-Impressionist, partly because of his refusal to answer questionnaires. But making up questionnaires to annoy other people is one of the most wholesome forms of indoor sport.

It was while pursuing this intellectual exercise that we recently began to inquire into the mystery of the inventor of fruit-salad.

* * *

You see, though the world is perfectly familiar with the names of the persons responsible for inventing the radio and the rodeo, sugar-tongs, tin tops for bottles and preserve-jars, bread-pudding, modernistic furniture, and a lot of other labor-making devices that while away the time and wither away the morals, nobody could tell us who originated fruit-salad: which is no wonder—considering that he certainly has the best of reasons for hiding himself.

* * *

And we wanted to find out.

* * *

* * *

We won't say what we wanted to do to that inventor, that perversion of Ambassador Nesselrode's pastry-cook, that saturnine——

* * *

Well, anyhow, we won't say what we intended to do to him. The statement might, when we shall have found him, be used in evidence against us—to prove what the lawyers call "intent"—at the trial.

* * *

Since we haven't found him yet, the present point is that we have sent out a searching inquiry to scholars all over the country. We limited ourselves to these United States because fruit-salad bears all the earmarks of being as much a native pest as it is a national disgrace, and because we have never encountered it in any other allegedly civilized land—except once in Paris.

(There, to be sure, we did see an American tourist lady actually mixing a fruit-salad for herself at the Cafe de la Paix—but the management forcibly removed her, with strict injunctions never to return.)

* * *

However, as we were saying, we sent out that questionnaire. The answers are still coming in. And they show, by their very variety of conflicting information, how keenly learned people really feel about this matter.

* * *

For instance, L. U. Jessel, of Seattle, Wash., writes us:

"There is a well-founded tradition in the Sioux Valley to the effect that fruit-salad was invented by a Flute chief—not 'chef,' 'chief'—who used it in a successful campaign against the Pawnees. You will understand, of course, that this was before the League of Nations outlawed fruit-salad as an instrument of national policy."

* * *

Whereas Gilman Oliver, of Sebasco Estates, Maine—where the fishing is the best we know—telegraphs:

"Fruit-salad invented by unknown Sebascoite during first days depression to save all unplowed-under hogs."

* * *

Indeed, one correspondent after another assures us that the inventor is dead, but no two agree on the detail of identity.

"Fruit-salad," writes Dr. Marcellus Bertlett, professor of dietetics at Wooford University, "was invented by a toxicologist at this institution—and by accident. He survived only twenty-four hours."

"Fruit-salad," says no less an authority than Harvey Robbins, of Mobile, Ala., "was invented by an American-born son of a Turkish sailor and a Fiji mother. The mob tore him limb from limb and buried him in an unknown grave. A few years ago, however, a monument was erected to the mob."

* * *

The only hope comes from three telegrams:

"Man arrested here as suspicious character." Walter Byam Holmes signals from Denver, "probably criminal you are seeking. Refuses to eat anything but raw meat."

"Wandering cook placed under restraint this city," clicks Warren Washaw, of Rochester, N. Y., "must be your man. Attempted suicide through overdose orange-juice."

"Person seen here yesterday resembling inventor of fruit-salad," Goodridge Goodrich wires from New Orleans. "That is," he explains with a vain-glorious disregard for telegraphic charges, "this man looks like what the inventor of fruit-salad ought to look like. Telegraph company refuses to transmit my description of him and Postmaster-General Farley bans it from mails. When last seen, suspect was fleeing in direction bayou country."

* * *

It begins to seem that this inventor moves too fast for us. We shall have to get Director Hoover on the job. But are confident that, ultimately, search will be rewarded, and then——

* * *

Meanwhile, there remains the baffling puzzle of our own identity. We are going on a short vacation soon. While absent, we shall practice writing our real name; then, on our return, we may be able to sign the Column.

Fair Enough

No Alcatraz.

I have been lobbying around Washington for the better part of a week trying to jimmy my way into Alcatraz Prison, but I am leaving without waiting to see how the dice fall, because I am sure I felt an acedeuce when I flung them against the board. It was my argument that they ought to ballyhoo the punishment as well as the crimes and the capture of famous tough guys, and I pointed out that the Army and the Navy both make use of the papers, the radio and the movies to exploit the attractions of the armed services. But they had heard that one before, and Henry Suydam, the press agent of the Department of Justice, gave me a peculiar look and said, "I don't suppose you were thinking of cutting yourself a slice of cake, were you?"

I think Bates is afraid that if the public ever learns how hard he makes it for Al Capone, Bailey, Kelly, Karpis and the rest of the boys on the island off San Francisco there will be a howl from the let-'em-eat-cake division of the prison reform element about unnecessary brutality, tending to crush the finer instincts of the inmates and sending them out into the world embittered against society.

* * * *

There may be something to that, but I still think it would be a helpful thing to let the bad kids of the country know all about the monotony and rigid discipline, the lonesomeness and the smells which constitute the life of the captured hoodlums, year after deadly year. And, as Henry suggests, it would be a good piece for the papers.

Before I left the department I called at Edgar Hoover's office and was shown through his big plant—a tour obviously formulated to impress people with the all-seeing quality of the Eye that Never Sleeps, which put me in mind of a visit to a model dairy or a Ford plant.

They have a museum of captured guns of many kinds, and the clear-eyed, clean-limbed, lean-jawed young King Brady who took me around amused me with some tricks of fingerprint transference and identification. They dust the fingerprint with some sort of powder, then press down with a strip of adhesive, like courtplaster, which transfers the print to the sticky surface. Then they press that upon sensitized paper, which they smear with some goo, and this gives them an indelible print to go by.

* * * *

It is a good show that they put on, though slightly World's Fair, and I came away impressed by their record in catching kidnapers or blowing them through, but wondering how long it will be before Hoover succumbs to the temptation to quit his $10,000 a year Government job to go out to get his.

He is all showman and apparently quite vain, for he is always appearing in public places to take his bows, and he can't pass a pine table and a water pitcher without jamming one hand into the breast of his coat, clearing his throat and beginning, "Ladies and gentlemen, we are gathered here today to consider the growing menace of crime, which is a festering vulture on the sacred wellsprings of our great democracy."

I am calling the other young man young King Brady because I didn't catch his name and because I gather that Mr. Hoover doesn't like his men to receive any publicity. He thinks it is bad for them but good for him, and only recently he left a fight in the Washington ball park on a sudden call to fly down to New Orleans for the Karpis arrest, thus smothering the field agents on the job who probably didn't need any master mind to assist them in the dramatic completion of a task which they had carried up to the climax on their own.

* * * *

They made a mystery of the retirement from the service of Melvin Purvis, of the Chicago bureau, the man who surrounded Dillinger and shelled him to death that night, but the presumption here is that he broke into print too often and too large.

Well, Hoover is now in a position to clear out and collect a fortune whenever he wants to. Most big-game detectives, when they quit the Government service of the New York Police Department, start private agencies and some of them write their memoirs for a few dollars. But Hoover, with his ballyhoo value, can get rich in the movies as technical adviser and nominal author in G-man productions and possibly as an actor, although he isn't very pretty. Moreover, should he leave them laughing when he says goodby he should be able to write his own ticket for the syndicate magazine and book rights to his story.

So that is the story of how I didn't go to Alcatraz. It was only a long shot, anyway.

Chapter Ten.

The New Corporation Tax Plan.

As the plan first emerged from the Treasury, after Mr. Roosevelt's message of March 3, 1936, you will remember that there was to be just a flat 33 1-3 per cent tax on undistributed corporate income. Dividends were to become subject to normal tax, and the existing corporation income and excess profits taxes were to be abolished.

The President said, "This will effect great simplification in tax procedure, in corporate financing and in the understanding of the whole subject by the citizens of the Nation."

Simplification?

Yes, as Mr. Bernard Kilgore, a Washington newspaper correspondent, remarked, "The same sort of theoretical simplicity that would improve the shoe business by making everybody wear size 8½ B."

As the realities began to dawn upon the Congressional committee, this beautiful simplicity, which had so pleased Mr. Roosevelt, began to vanish in a maze of exceptions. Special treatment had to be devised for companies in bankruptcy, for banks and insurance companies, for companies with indentures preventing the payment of dividends under certain circumstances, for foreign corporations, for foreign shareholders in domestic corporations, for railroads, and finally for corporations with losses in preceding years.

The whole matter has now become so completely tangled that many banks are actually hesitating to make loans to would-be borrowers until they can see what delightfully "simple" formula finally emerges, and how it would affect the individual concern in question.

Many Corporations Suspend Future Plans.

And many corporations are suspending all future plans for increasing, or even carrying on their business, until they can figure out where these latest steps in the march toward Utopia will leave them.

As this is being written the Senate is about to take up the consideration of the House bill devised to carry out the President's proposal. There is some hope that the upper house will exercise a little independent thought of its own. There is scarcely any hope that the proposal will receive the careful study and consideration of its far-reaching effects and implications, which it should have before it becomes enacted into law—for this is an election year.

But—no matter what form the ultimate legislation may take—we are concerned with the President's proposal, because it indicates what he will "go on trying to do" if he is re-elected.

We know that there are two things in which the President is deeply interested—which he desires to accomplish—and which we, too, desire to accomplish. They are the prevention in future of excessive booms and depressions; and the prevention of monopoly.

And yet about the only two things in the present proposition which are clear are:

1. That the effect of the new tax proposals will be to aggravate rather than to ameliorate the business cycle, and

2. That the effect of the new tax proposals will be to foster a monopolistic tendency in business.

As to booms and depressions, Raymond Moley, who is certainly no reactionary nor friend of the vested interests, has this to say in a recent editorial:

"Surpluses are the life insurance policies of business firms. Neither Congress nor any administrative agency can determine fairly how much insurance any one corporation needs. That differs with the nature of its business and with the nature of the corporation itself. Some companies need to lay aside large surpluses in good years to tide them over lean years in a business which is notoriously of the "feast or famine" type, like the steel industry. Others, conspicuously the chemical industry, have to be ready for the obsolescence of plant or process that research so often brings upon them with lightning suddeness. Now corporations lay up funds for future growth. In short, any law which imposes the same limitations upon corporate thrifts for all corporations is bound to work great injustices and to wreck many enterprises. And any attempt to differentiate among them by administrative regulation will lead to hopeless complications.

Fate of Employes, Stockholders In Doubt.

"To force industry to pay out all of its earnings in dividends in good years, will of course, have the effect of accentuating booms. And in years of depression, industry will find itself without means of paying for current operations— in plainer words, without money to meet the pay roll. Had American industry entered this depression stripped of all surpluses, scores of the biggest corporations could not have survived."

That is what Mr. Moley has to say.

And, if scores of the biggest corporations could not have survived, what would have happened to the little corporations? What would have happened not only to employes dependent upon industrial pay rolls, but to stockholders and to the savings banks and insurance companies who held corporate bonds?

Few of us realize, I think, the extent to which corporate surpluses acted as a cushion against the full impact of the depression through which we have just passed.

The National City Bank, of New York, recently published some interesting figures in regard the income distribution of all the country's corporations. These figures show that from 1921 to 1933, inclusive, corporate net income after taxes aggregated $41,000,000,000, while dividends disbursed during this period aggregated $50,700,000,000.

This means that the corporations paid $9,700,000,000 more than their net income out of previously accumulated surplus. But it means more than that. The years 1922 to 1929 were years of accumulation.

In the four years from 1930 to 1933 the corporations paid out more than $24,000,000,000 in excess of what they earned during those four years. All the accumulated surplus of the previous nine years, plus almost $10,000,000,000 of surplus accumulated before 1921, was paid out during the four years of the depression.

Bear in mind that about 65 per cent of what corporations pay out goes to labor in wages, salaries and pensions.

What do you suppose would have happened to wage earners, to shareholders, to the whole economic structure of our country, if we had a few Rooseveltian tax proposals enacted into law back in 1921?

What do you suppose will happen to the country a few years from now if we continue to be charmed by the improvisations of the genial gentleman in the White House?

And now, as to the second point, namely, that the present tax proposals tend to foster those very tendencies toward monopoly against which Mr. Roosevelt has crusaded, and against which every patriotic citizen is eager to crusade.

Again we see that the gun goes off in the opposition direction from that intended by those superb marksmen in Washington.

To see why, it is only necessary to realize that it is not proposed to tax existing accumulations of surplus, but rather to prevent the accumulation of any future surplus by a prohibitive tax, which practically forces the distribution of all earnings. The intent is clear from the testimony of the Treasury "experts."

What does that mean?

Established Firms Given Impregnable Position.

It means that the established corporation with a substantial accumulated surplus is given an almost impregnable position of strength as against any new corporation, large or small—but particularly small—which might seek to enter into the same field.

Surely this point requires no elaboration.

At the time when the NRA was enacted in 1933, many of the Nation's business leaders favored the proposal, because they did not as yet realize that free competition alone would make possible the continuance of a free enterprise order—because they did not as yet realize that only producing more goods at lower prices would they be able to pay decent wages to their workers and dividends to their shareholders. They saw only their own immediate advantage.

Fortunately, these business leaders seem to have learned a valuable lesson, for although many of them might profit in an immediate selfish way from the enactment of the present tax proposals, they have become wise enough to see that the promise of a protected monopolistic position for industry is in the end the promise of a Socialistic state.

And if the business leaders of this country were not aware of what the present tax proposals mean, there is, in any case, one group which is aware of it. The only outright support of the new corporate tax submitted to the House committee so far—except that of Treasury experts—has come from Mr. Max Bedacht, who appeared on behalf of the Communist Party. His only serious criticism was that it was not proposed to tax existing corporate surplus as well as future accumulations, and that the old corporate income and excess profit taxes were to be repealed.

Much to the embarassment of the New Deal members of the committee, Mr. Bedacht could not even be tricked into voicing a disapproval of the President's proposal.

"Then you are against the bill because we propose repeal of these taxes (that is the old taxes) and do not include a direct levy on existing surpluses?"

That was Mr. Vinson's rather clever question.

"We are not against this bill," said Mr. Bedacht amidst Republican laughter, "we just don't think it goes far enough."

Toward the end of the hearings before the House committee, there was another humorous incident. It was suddenly discovered that a large part of the additional revenue prophesied for the next fiscal year would not reach the Federal Treasury until the year after. This is because the chief revenue will be derived from the recipients of corporate dividends and not direct from the corporations.

At first this caused consternation among the New Deal forces, but then Mr. Doughton, New Deal chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, made this curious statement: "There are two purposes in this bill, one for reform and the other for revenue. In order to get reform we have to be a little patient about getting revenue."

I call this a curious statement, because the avowed purpose of the bill was to produce immediate revenues to take the place of the invalidated processing taxes and to provide for the bonus payments. Mr. Doughton apparently forgot this avowed purpose when he let the reform cat out of the bag.

It is not necessary to point out—because a majority of the American people are aware of it—how not only reform (which may be good or bad) but stray bits of communism and fascism and every other kind of ism keep creeping into measures which are supposed to be revenue acts, or relief appropriations, or bills to regulate the navigable waters.

But it is necessary to point out how, once again, Mr. Roosevelt defines a purpose and sends along with it a proposal to accomplish something vastly different—if not the exact opposite.

And now, since I have tried to confine this discussion to only three major problems, and since in the case of the first two I have endeavored not only to criticize Mr. Roosevelt's policy but to suggest suitable alternatives, let me attempt to do the same thing here.

1. If it is really desired to do something in the way of tax reform to prevent a recurrence of excessive booms and depressions, why not repeal, or at least drastically modify, the Federal Capital Gains Tax?

I know of no single action that would do more to prevent excessive stock exchange booms, and consequently excessive depressions, and I am convinced that the Government would gain rather than lose in revenues by such action.

2. Just as the capital gains tax affects security prices, so a great contributory factor to real estate booms and depressions is to be found in the general property tax as now levied by most of our States and local taxing authorities. Such a tax should be based upon income produced by land or real estate—not upon some hypothetical capital value which has no relation to income production. Other countries have long ago recognized this. It would be well for our Federal Government to make a study of the general property tax in order to be able to make recommendations for reform to the States and local authorities.

3. If it is really desired to balance the budget, why not do two things:

(a) Recognize that at least half of the money now spent on relief is wasted because it never reaches the recipents, and

(b) Broaden the base of the income tax so that gavernmental economy will become popular and governmental extravagance unpopular.

These are three definite suggestions as to taxation. I admit that all of them are what the New Dealers would call "politically impossible"—a definition which applies for them to any action that will not bring immediate results in popular votes.

But I challenge anyone to contest the soundness of these suggestions.

I challenge anyone to show that they are not to the best interests of the common people.

I challenge anyone to show that the whole country would not be better off if they were adopted.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Prize Editorial.

A big New York corporation is offering $50,000 in prizes for the best essays by high school students, college boys, civic leaders, etc., on cutting down automobile accidents. Five hundred dollars is offered for the best editorial on traffic safety, and this column hereby goes after it, agreeable to taking the prize in cash, gas, or spark plugs:

With the arrival of the open season for the constantly growing disorder known as automobile driving, it behooves us to sound the editorial page klaxon, give four shrill blasts on the office siren, jam down the figurative foot brakes and hope for the best. The two foremost questions of the hour are:

1. Is it possible to propagandize the automobile operators of America into behaving like civilized human beings?

2. Can the countless natives who are automatically and instantly wafted from civilization to barbarism by mere contact with a steering wheel, be pamphleteered into a proper respect for their fellow man?

The answer, in our battered opinion, may be summed up in three loud blasts on the tooter, another fiendish grimace and the usual coarse crack at anybody not in full flight.

* * * *

All the experience of the past 30 years has shown the complete futility of trying to reach by essay the fellow who beats the stop light and thinks a fender is designed to shunt women and children back onto the sidewalk with the requisite backspins. All the lessons of traffic control have definitely established the fact that the millions of Americans who cannot understand the three simple words "Stop." "Go" and "Caution" will never digest an editorial.

* * * *

We believe, gentle readers, that possession of a motor car works a complete transition in human character. Put a bishop at the wheel of a streamlined roadster and he becomes a Public Enemy No. 1. Lift the most polished gentleman in the community from his cloistered home into the driver's seat of an automobile and he will begin shouting from one side of his mouth, making faces at pedestrians and thumbing his nose at all less animated objects.

* * * *

When reckless driving is curbed on the highways of America it will be done by policemen who are not too bored to enforce the laws, by judges who are not easily reached by political "fixers" and by hoosegows with proper accommodations for potential murderers whose slogan is "Through humanity with gas and siren!"

Tells of Townsend Organization

Charles Hawkes, recently resigned manager of the Massachusetts area of the Townsend organization, told House committee yesterday that the organization was in a "deplorable condition" and needed reorganization.

Vote $1,425,000,000 Relief Bill

amendment, introduced by Vandenberg, providing for a $2,000 fine or one year in jail or both for any person soliciting political contributions from persons on relief. An amendment by Senator Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi, providing that no candidate for office, no political party official and no public official might hold an administrative job in connection with relief was voted down.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, made an unsuccessful attempt to reduce the relief appropriation by 20 per cent. He said he felt that as conditions improved Government expenditures should be reduced, but that, as a matter of fact, expenditures during the next fiscal year will be $1,000,000,000 more than during the present year.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, opposed the Vandenberg amendment turning administration of relief back to the States. He said he believed the responsibility should be with the Government that contributed the most money. He said the "people at home" would have less sense of responsibility than Federal officials.

Vandenberg argued that relief expenditures would be cut considerably if the responsibility were returned to the States.

Spending Program Attacked.

Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, attacked the Administration's spending program in connection with the proposed relief appropriation and declared the demands of the President for the coming fiscal year exceeded by more than $1,000,000,000 the total income subject to taxation of all corporations.

In the course of his remarks upon relief he referred to a series of articles on the relief situation in Westchester County by Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer. The articles appeared in The Washington Post. He read a part of the articles into the record.

"Those who read these articles," he said, "must be convinced that there was real evidence to support every charge made."

Referring to Mrs. Meyer's charges of politics in the Westchester relief administration, he said that "these are serious charges made by a respectable and well-known woman in a highly valuable and well-known newspaper of Washington."

"What has happened?" he asked. "Did Mr. Hopkins say anything in reply? No, he goes over to the House and hides behind the skirts of a woman Congressman who undertook to defend what had gone on in New York, and she showed conclusively by her efforts to defend that she knew practically nothing of what was going on in that county."

The reference was to Mrs. Caroline O'Day (Democrat), of New York.

Turning to the discussion of taxes and their relationship to expenditures, Hastings said:

"I think it is pretty generally conceded that we cannot go very much higher in the surtax brackets than we have already gone because at the present time there are persons paying into the Federal Treasury 75 per cent of all their income. I take it that if we go much beyond that point it would be held that we were beyond the bounds of reasonableness and that we could not take more without being charged with confiscating the fortunes of those people.

Increase In Tax.

"If we take all the present income as estimated by the Treasury and undertake to pay the deficit and balance the budget, and if we did it by taking it all from the corporations, it would be necessary to increase the taxes of the corporations from the present rate of 15 or 16 per cent to 57 or 58 per cent.

"It seems to me that these figures demonstrate that there must be other means of meeting these expenses, or, what would be more sensible, cutting down the expenses of the Government."

Hastings predicted that the only way to meet expenditures if they continue at the present rate would be by direct taxation upon individuals.

"I invite attention to these matters at this time," he continued, "because we are now called upon to pass a bill which in my judgment shows upon its face that the money will be in large part wasted and not used for the purposes for which the Congress intends.

"We are again called upon to do what? To appropriate to the President of the United States, to expend as his discretion may dictate, $1,425,000,000 'for relief and work relief on useful projects in the United States.' No such thing has ever happened until this Administration came into power."

Hastings said it was just as important for the people to hold on to the spending power of the Government as to hold on to the taxing power.

"We have done the one thing which puts us nearer a dictatorship than any other suggestion that could be made or any other course that could be taken," he continued. "Whenever the Congress of the United States either loses control of the taxing power and passes it to some other person, or loses control of the purse, that minute we start on our way, that minute we start to destroy America."

Senate Harangued by Visitor In Gallery; He Goes to Gallinger

In the course of a speech in the Senate yesterday, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, said he would like to hear from his constituents on the question at issue.

A man in the gallery, interpreting this as a personal invitation, jumped to his feet and began making a speech. He babbled away in a foreign accent, and bystanders were not able to understand him.

While he was talking he dropped a letter to the Senate floor.

A Metropolitan policeman stationed in the Senate gallery arrested him, and later had him taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

Senator Copeland, who had halted his speech, started off again with a joking reference to the interruption.

The man identified himself as H. K. Balos, 40, of New Orleans. He claimed to be a friend of Gov. Harold Hoffman, of New Jersey, and said he had been helpful to him in the Hauptmann case.

Balos also said he was a friend of President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner. In his pockets were found naturalization papers showing he was born in Corfu, Greece.

Balos was taken to Gallinger Hospital about two hours after Representative Marion Zioncheck, of Seattle, the Katzenjammer kid of Congress, was taken there.

Dr. Townsend, Smith Planning To 'Seize U. S.'

'Anyone but Roosevelt' Is Slogan of Combined Pension Forces.

By the United Press.

New York, June 1.—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, father of the old-age revolving pension plan, and the Rev. Gerald K. Smith, who inherited the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth organization, joined forces today and asserted they would "get rid of Roosevelt and capture the United States Government."

Dr. Townsend, who with Smith jointly announced consolidation of their efforts to save the country, added that followers of Father Charles E. Coughlin had joined the anti-Roosevelt drive, although the priest, he said, had not committed himself.

"If President Roosevelt is re-elected he will turn this country into the most ruthless dictatorship possible," said the country preacher. "He can turn the CCC camps into storm troopers in five minutes and turn them on us or anyone else who opposes him."

Townsend said all the dissatisfied persons in the country are joining the combination "except the radicals, including EPIC supporters of Upton Sinclair, people who believe in the Bible, believe in God, cheer when the flag passes by—the Bible belt—solid Americans who are opposed to the soft-pate dictatorship in Washington today."

The slogan of the new movement will be "'Anyone but Roosevelt."

Leadership Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

The leadership of the Townsend old-age pension movement was assailed yesterday before a House investigating committee by four witnesses, one of whom asserted the organization was "now in the hands of racketeers."

In rapid succession the witnesses questioned the motives of Townsend leaders and called for a reorganization as necessary because of disclosures made by the Congressional inquiry.

Charles M. Hawks, recently resigned as Townsend area manager for Massachusetts; the Rev. Alfred J. Wright, of Cleveland, member of the board of directors, and Frank L. McWade, until recently Rochester, N. Y., area manager, and Robert E. Clements, co-founder of the movement, were outspoken in their condemnation.

"The organization is now in the hands of men who have lost sight of its original intent," said McWade. "It is in the hands of racketeers."

Clements, who formerly was national secretary, termed the recent Townsend alliance with the share-the-wealth movement started by the late Senator Huey P. Long a "fatal blunder."

Seeks Limelight.

He said he did not believe the Rev. Gerald K. Smith, now head of the Long movement, controlled any of the share-the-wealth clubs and was merely seeking "the limelight and a berth."

McWade's testimony followed that of Wright, who labeled Dr. F. E. Townsend, head of the movement, as an "autocrat and a despot," and asserted a reorganization was vitally necessary.

Hawks testified the organization was "emphatically in deplorale condition" and a "reorganization is more badly needed than at any time in its history."

Townsend's defiance of the committee for which the House voted to cite him for contempt, was "a disappointment" to Hawks and McWade said "if Dr. Townsend wasn't mixed up with these racketeers then he would not have walked out on this committee and refused to testify."

McWade was particularly critical of the Rev. Dr. Clinton Wunder, Eastern area manager who refused to appear before the committee, and was cited for contempt along with Townsend and J. B. Kiefer, of Chicago, a board member.

Letters from Wunder's correspondence which James R. Sullivan, committee counsel, said were so "obscene, vile and vicious" that he would offer them for record without reading them, caused McWade to characterize Wunder as "a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde and maybe all Hyde now."

Testimony by Wright and Clements, disclosed the Townsend bank balance had dwindled from about $160,000 on last April 1 to between $30,000 and $50,000.

Clements, who resigned April 1, said the balance had always increased during his connection with the organization and never decreased.

Germany Is Buying Less American Cotton

Bremen, June 1 (AP).—Shrinkage in German cotton purchases from the United States, owing to currency complications, was illustrated in a report by Emil Schter, director of the Bremen Cotton Exchange.

It was shown that while 2,618,000 bales of American cotton were imported into Germany in 1927, and 1,737,000 bales in 1933, only 558,000 bales were imported in 1935, less than 30 per cent of the reich's total cotton imports, which in 1935 amounted to 1,907,000 bales.

Supreme Court Majority Denounces, Minority Upholds Wage Fixing by States

Freedom of Contract Guarded By Process Clause, Butler Says

The petitioner does not suggest and reasonably it cannot be thought that, so far as concerns repugnancy to the due process clause, there is any difference between the minimum wage law for the District of Columbia and the clause of the New York act, "less than sufficient to meet the minimum cost of living necessary for health." Petitioner does not claim that element was validated by including with it the other ingredient, "less than the fair and reasonable value of the services rendered." * * *

There is no blinking the fact that the State court construed the prescribed standard to include cost of living or that petitioner here refuses to accept that construction that the Court of Appeals misconstrued the act cannot be entertained. This court is without power to put a different construction upon the State enactment from that adopted by the highest court of the State. * * * Exclusive authority to enact carries with it final authority to say what the measure means. Jones vs. Prairie Oil Co., 273 U. S. 195, 200. The standard of "minimum fair wage rates" for women workers to be prescribed must be considered as if both elements—value of service and living wage—were embodied in the statutory definition itself. International Harvester Co. vs. Kentucky, 234 U. S. 216, 220. * * *

The State court rightly held that the Adkins case (in the District of Columbia) controls this one and requires that relator be discharged upon the ground that the legislation under which he was indicted and imprisoned is repugnant to the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. * * *

Upon the face of the act the question arises whether the State may impose upon the employers State-wide minimum wage rates for all competent experienced women workers whom they may have in their service. That question involves another one. It is: Whether the State has power similarly to subject to State-made wages all adult women employed in trade, industry or business, other than farm work. These were the questions decided in the Adkins case. So far at least as concerns the validity of the enactment under consideration, the restraint imposed by the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment upon legislative power of the State is the same as that imposed by the corresponding provision of the fifth amendment upon the legislative power of the United States.

Part of Liberty.

This court's opinion shows (pages 545, 546): The right to make contracts about one's affairs is a part of the liberty protected by the due process clause. Within this liberty are provisions of contracts between employer and employe fixing the wages to be paid. In making contracts of employment, generally speaking, the parties have equal right to obtain from each other the best terms they can by private bargaining. Legislative abridgement of that freedom can only be justified by the existence of exceptional circumstances. Freedom of contract is the general rule and restraint the exception. This court has found not repugnant to the due process clause statutes fixing rates and charges to be exacted by businesses impressed with a public interest, relating to contracts for the performance of public work, prescribing the character, methods and the time of payment of wages, fixing hours of labor. Physical differences between men and women must be recognized in proper cases and legislation fixing hours or conditions of work may properly take them into account, but (page 553) "we cannot accept the doctrine that women of mature age, sui juris, require or may be subjected to restrictions upon their liberty of contract which could not lawfully be imposed in the case of men under similar circumstances. To do so would be to ignore all the implications to be drawn from the present-day trend of legislation, as well as that of common thought and usage, by which woman is accorded emancipation from the old doctrine that she must be given special protection or be subjected to special restraint in her contractual and civil relationships. * * * (Page 554.) Enough has been said to show that the authority to fix hours of labor cannot be exercised except in respect of those occupations where work of long continued duration is detrimental to health. * * *"

The decision and the reasoning upon which it rests clearly show that the State is without power by any form of legislation to prohibit, change or nullify contracts between employers and adult women workers as to the amount of wages to be paid.

Then, the opinion emphasizes objections specifically applicable to the requirement that the minimum wages to be prescribed under the District act shall be adequate "to supply the necessary cost of living to any such women workers to maintain them in good health and to protect their morals." Some of them were: " * * 'The act takes account of the necessities of only the employe; to the extent that the sum fixed exceeds fair value of service rendered, it amounts to a compulsory exaction for the support of a partially indigent person for whose condition there rests upon the employer no peculiar responsibility; the statute exacts from the employer an arbitrary payment for a purpose and upon a basis having no causal connection with his business or the contract or the work the employe engages to do; the declared basis is not the value of the service rendered but the extraneous circumstance that the employe needs to get a prescribed sum of money to insure her subsistence, health and morals. The court said: The ethical right of every worker, man or woman, to have a living wage may be conceded. The fallacy of the proposed method of attaining it is that it assumes that every employer is bound at all events to furnish it. The moral requirement, implicit in every contract of employment, viz., that the amount to be paid and the service to be rendered shall bear to each other some relation of just equivalence, is completely ignored. * * *

Constitutional Obstacles.

Illustrating particular constitutional difficulties encountered by the enactment then before us, the opinion proceeds (p. 559): "Should a statute undertake to vest in a commission power to determine the quantity of food necessary for individual support and require the shopkeeper, if he sell to the individual at all, to furnish that quantity at not more than a fixed maximum, it would undoubtedly fall before the constitutional test. The fallacy of any argument in support of the validity of such a statute would be quickly exposed. The argument in support of that now being considered is equally fallacious, though the weakness of it may not be so plain. A statute requiring an employer to pay in money, to pay at prescribed and regular intervals, to pay the value of the services rendered, even to pay with fair relation to the extent of the benefit obtained from the service, would be understandable. But a statute which prescribes payment without regard to any of these things, and solely with relation to circumstances apart from the contract of employment, the business affected by it, and the work done under it, is so clearly the product of a naked, arbitrary exercise of power that it cannot be allowed to stand under the Constitution of the United States."

* * * *

If the State has power to single out for regulation the amount of wages to be paid women, the value of their services would be a material consideration. But that fact has no relevancy upon the question whether the State has any such power. And utterly without significance upon the question of power is the suggestion that the New York prescribed standard includes value of service with cost of living whereas the District of Columbia standard was based upon the latter alone. As shown above, the dominant issue in the Adkins case was whether Congress had power to establish minimum wages for adult women workers in the District of Columbia. The opinion directly answers in the negative. The ruling that defects in the prescribed standard stamped that act as arbitrary and invalid was an additional ground of subordinate consequence.

* * * *

To distinguish this from the Adkins case, petitioner refers to changes in conditions that have come since that decision, cites great increase during recent years in the number of women wage earners and invokes the first section of the act, called "Factual background."

The act is not to meet an emergency; it discloses a permanent policy; the increasing number of women workers suggests that more and more they are getting and holding jobs that otherwise would belong to men. * * *

While men are left free to fix their wages by agreement with employers, it would be fanciful to suppose that the regulation of women's wages would be useful to prevent or lessen the evils listed in the first section of the act. Men in need of work are as likely as women to accept the low wages offered by unscrupulous employers. Men in greater number than women support themselves and dependents and because of need will work for whatever wages they can get and that without regard to the value of the service and even though the pay is less than minima prescribed in accordance with this act. It is plain that, under circumstances such as those portrayed in the "Factual background," prescribing of minimum wages for women alone would unreasonably restrain them in competition with men and tend arbitrarily to deprive them of employment and a fair chance to find work.

Wage Ruling

Stone declared that "the vague and general pronouncement of the fourteenth amendment against deprivation of liberty without due process of law is a limitation of legislative power, not a formula for its exercise."

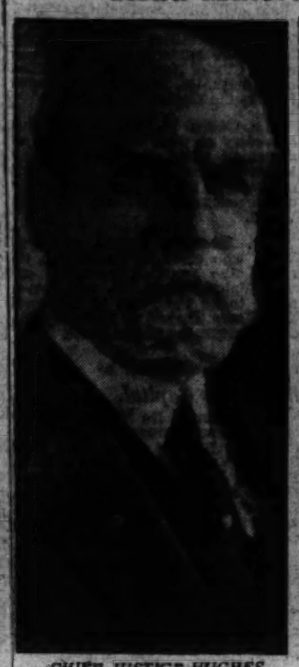
No Fine-Spun Distinction.

"It makes no fine-spun distinctions," he continued, "between methods which the legislature may and which it may not choose to solve a pressing problem of government. It is plain too, that unless the language of the amendment and the decisions of this court are to be ignored, the liberty which the amendment protects is not freedom from restraint of all law or of any law which reasonable men may think an appropriate means for dealing with any of those matters of public concern with which it is the business of government to deal. There is grim irony in speaking of the freedom of contract or those who, because of their economic necessities, give their services for less than is needful to keep body and soul together.

In his separate opinion, handed down at the same time he concurred in the minority opinion, the Chief Justice declared:

"I can find nothing in the Federal Constitution which denies to the State the power to protect women from being exploited by overreaching employers through the refusal of a fair wage as defined in the New York statute and ascertained in a reasonable manner by competent authority."

Read Minority Decisions



CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES.

JUSTICE STONE.

Aid to Women Constitutional, Hughes Holds

New York Law Is Valid, He Says; Placed Ban on Exploitation.

I cannot agree that the case should be regarded as controlled by Adkins vs. Children's Hospital, 261 U. S. 525. And I can find nothing in the Federal Constitution which denies to the State the power to protect women from being exploited by overreaching employers through the refusal of a fair wage as defined in the New York statute and ascertained in a reasonable manner by competent authority. * * *

The constitutional validity of a minimum wage statute like the New York act has not heretofore been passed upon by this court. As I have said, the required correspondence of the prescribed "fair wage" to the reasonable value of the service which the employe performs stands out as an essential feature of the statutory plan. The statute for the District of Columbia which was before us in the Adkins case did not have that feature. That statute provided for a minimum wage adequate "to supply the necessary cost of living to women workers" and "to maintain them in health and to protect their morals." 40 Stat. 963. The standard thus set up did not take account of the reasonable value of the service rendered. As this court said, it compelled the employer "to pay at least the sum fixed in any event, because the employe needs it, but requires no service of equivalent value from the employe. * * * New York and other States have been careful to adopt a different and improved standard, in order to meet the objection aimed at the earlier statutes, by requiring a fair equivalence of wage and service.

That the difference is a material one I think is shown by the opinion in the Adkins case. That opinion contained a broad discussion of State power, but it singled out as an adequate ground for the finding of invalidity that the statute gave no regard to the situation of the employer and to the reasonable value of the service for which the wage was paid. * * *

We have here a question of constitutional law of grave importance, applying to the statutes of several States in a matter of profound public interest. I think that we should deal with that question upon its merits, without feeling that we are bound by a decision which on its facts is not strictly in point.

Cites Conditions.

The validity of the New York act must be considered in the light of the conditions to which the exercise of the protective power of the State was addressed. * * *

The Legislature finds that the employment of women and minors in trade and industry in the State of New York at wages unreasonably low and not fairly commensurate with the value of the services rendered is a matter of vital public concern; that many women and minors are not as a class upon a level of equality in bargaining with their employers in regard to minimum fair wage standards and that "freedom of contract" as applied to their relations with employers is illusory; that, by reason of the necessity of seeking support for themselves and their dependents, they are forced to accept whatever wages are offered; and that judged by any reasonable standard, wages in many instances are fixed by chance and caprice and the wages accepted are often found to bear no relation to the fair value of the service. The Legislature further states that women and minors are peculiarly subject "to the overreaching of inefficient, harsh or ignorant employers," and that, in the absence of effective minimum fair wages rates, the constant lowering of wages by unscrupulous employers constitutes a serious form of unfair competition against other employers, reduces the purchasing power of the workers and threatens the stability of industry. The Legislature deemed it essential to seek the correction of these evils by the exercise of the police power "for the protection of industry and of the women and minors employed therein and of the interest of the community at large in their health and well-being and in the prevention of the deterioration of the race." Sec. 550.

In the factual brief, statistics are presented showing the increasing number of wage-earning women, and that women are in industry and in other fields of employment because they must support themselves and their dependents. Data are submitted, from reports of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, showing such discrepancies and variations in wages paid for identical work as to indicate that no relationship exists between the value of the services rendered and the wages paid. It also appears that working women are largely unorganized and that their bargaining power is relatively weak. The seriousness of the social problem is presented. Inquiries by the New York State Department of Labor in co-operation with the Emergency Relief Bureau of New York City disclosed the large number of women employed in industry whose wages were insufficient for the support of themselves and those dependent upon them. For that reason they had been accepted for relief and their wages were being supplemented by payments from the Emergency Relief Bureau. Thus the failure of overreaching employers to pay to women the wages commensurate with the value of services rendered has imposed a direct and heavy burden upon the taxpayers. * * *

Must Regard Facts.

We are not at liberty to disregard these facts. * * *

We have had frequent occasion to consider the limitations of liberty of contract. While it is highly important to preserve that liberty from arbitrary and capricious interference, it is also necessary to prevent its abuse, as otherwise it could be used to override all public interests and thus in the end destroy the very freedom of opportunity which it is designed to safeguard.

We have repeatedly said that liberty of contract is a qualified and not an absolute right. "There is no absolute freedom to do as one wills or to contract as one chooses. * * * Liberty implies the absence of arbitrary restraint, not immunity from reasonable regulations and prohibitions imposed in the interests of the community.'" Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R. Co. vs. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 567. * * *

* * * *

When there are conditions which specially touch the health and well-being of women, the State may exert its power in a reasonable manner for their protection, whether or not a similar regulation is, or could be, applied to men. * * * The fourteenth amendment found the States with that protective power and did not take it away or remove the reasons for its exercise. Changes have been made within the domain of State policy and upon an appraisal of State interests.

Denies Court's Liberty.

We have not yet arrived at a time when we are at liberty to over-ride the judgment of the State and decide that women are not the special subject of exploitation because they are women and as such are not in a relatively defenseless sposition. * * *

Granted that the burden of the support of women who do not receive a living wage cannot be transferred to employers who pay the equivalent of the service they obtain, there is no reason why the burden caused by the failure to pay that equivalent should not be placed upon those who create it. The fact that the State cannot secure the benefit to society of a living wage for women employes by any enactment which bears unreasonably upon employers does not preclude the State from seeking its objective by means entirely fair both to employers and the women employed.

In the statute before us, no unreasonableness appears. The end is legitimate and the means appropriate. I think that the act should be upheld.

14th Amendment 'Limitation of Legislative Power, Not Formula for Its Exercise,' He Says in Opinion Read for Dissenters.

While I agree with all that the Chief Justice has said, I would not make the differences between the present statute and that involved in the Adkins case the sole basis of decision. I attach little importance to the fact that the earlier statute was aimed only at a starvation wage and that the present one does not prohibit such a wage unless it is also less than the reasonable value of the service. Since neither statute compels employment at any wage, I do not assume that employers in one case, more than in the other, would pay the minimum wage if the service were worth less.

The vague and general pronouncement of the fourteenth amendment against deprivation of liberty without due process of law is a limitation of legislative power, not a formula for its exercise. It does not purport to say in what particular manner that power shall be exerted. It makes no fine-spun distinctions between methods which the legislature may and which it may not choose to solve a pressing problem of government. It is plain too, that, unless the language of the amendment and the decisions of this court are to be ignored, the liberty which the amendment protects is not freedom from restraint of all law or of any law which reasonable men may think an appropriate means for dealing with any of those matters of public concern with which it is the business of government to deal. There is grim irony in speaking of the freedom of contract of those who, because of their economic necessities, give their services for less than is needful to keep body and soul together. But if this is freedom of contract no one has ever denied that it is freedom that may be restrained, notwithstanding the Fourteenth Amendment, by a statute passed in the public interest.

In many cases this court has sustained the power of legislatures to prohibit or restrict the terms of a contract, including the price term, in order to accomplish what the legislative body may reasonably consider a public purpose. They include cases, which have neither been overruled nor discredited, in which the sole basis of regulation was the fact that circumstances, beyond the control of the parties, had so seriously curtailed the regulative power of competition as to place buyers or sellers at a disadvantage in the bargaining struggle, such that a legislature might reasonably have contemplated serious consequences to the community as a whole and have sought to avoid them by regulation of the terms of the contract. Munn vs. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113; Brass vs. Stoeser, 153 U. S. 391; German Alliance Insurance Co. vs. Kansas, 233 U. S. 389, 409; Terminal Taxicab Co. vs. District of Columbia, 241 U. S. 252; Block vs. Hirsh, 256 U. S. 135; Marcus Brown Co. vs. Feldman, 256 U. S. 170; Levy Leasing Co. vs. Siegel, 258 U. S. 242; Nebbia vs. New York, 291 U. S. 502; see also, Frisbie vs. United States, 157 U. S. 160; Knoxville Iron Co. vs. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13; McLean vs. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 539; Mutual Loan Co. vs. Martell, 222 U. S. 225.

No one doubts that the presence in the community of a large number of those compelled by economic necessity to accept a wage less than is needful for subsistence is a matter of grave public concern, the more so when, as has been demonstrated here, it tends to produce ill health, immorality and deterioration of the race. The fact that at one time or another Congress and the legislatures of 17 States, and the legislative bodies of 21 foreign countries, including Great Britain and its four commonwealths, have found that wage regulation is an appropriate corrective for serious social and economic maladjustments growing out of inequality in bargaining power, precludes, for me, any assumption that it is a remedy beyond the bounds of reason. It is difficult to imagine any grounds, other than our own personal economic predilections, for saying that the contract of employment is any the less an appropriate subject of legislation than are scores of others, in dealing with which this court has held that legislatures may curtail individual freedom in the public interest.

If it is a subject upon which there is power to legislate at all, the Fourteenth Amendment makes no distinction between the methods by which legislatures may deal with it, any more than it prescribes the regulation of one term of a bargain more than another if it is properly the subject of regulation. No one has yet attempted to say upon what basis of history, principles of government, law or logic, it is within due process to regulate the hours and conditions of labor of women, see Muller vs. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412; Riley vs. Massachusetts, 232 U. S. 671; Hawley vs. Walker, 232 U. S. 718; Miller vs. Wilson, 236 U. S. 373; Bosley vs. McLaughlin, 236 U. S. 385, and of men, Bunting vs. Oregon, 243 U. S. 426, and the time and manner of payment of the wage, McLean vs. Arkansas, supra; Knoxville Iron Co. vs. Harbison, supra; Patterson vs. Bark Eudora, 190 U. S. 169; compare New York Central R. R. Co. vs. White, 243 U. S. 188; Arizona Employers Liability Cases, 250 U. S. 400, but that regulation of the amount of the wage passes beyond the constitutional limitation; or to say upon what theory the amount of a wage is any the less the subject of regulation in the public interest than that of insurance premiums, German Alliance Insurance Co. vs. Kansas, supra, or of the commissions of insurance brokers, O'Gorman & Young, Inc., vs. Hartford Fire Insurance Co., 282 U. S. 251, or of the charges of grain elevators, Munn vs. Illinois, supra; Brass vs. Stoeser, supra, or of the price which the farmer receives for his milk, or which the wage earner pays for it, Nebbia vs. New York, supra.

These considerations were developed at length in Tyson vs. Banton, 273 U. S. 418, 447 et seq., and in Ribnik vs. McBride, 277 U. S. 350, 359, et seq., and need not be further elaborated now. It is true that the court rejected them there, but it later accepted and applied them as the basis of decision in O'Gorman & Young, Inc., vs. Hartford Fire Insurance Co., supra; Nebbia vs. New York, supra; Hageman Farms Corporation vs. Baldwin, 293 U. S. 163; Bordens Farm Products Co. vs. Ten Eyck, No. 597, decided February 19, 1936. Both precedent, and, what is more important, reason, require their acceptance now. See Burnet vs. Coronado Oil & Gas Co., 285 U. S. 393, 405. In upholding State minimum price regulation in the milk industry, in Nebbia vs. New York, supra, the court declared, p. 537:

"So far as the requirement of due process is concerned, and in the absence of other constitutional restriction, a State is free to adopt whatever economic policy may reasonably be deemed to promote public welfare, and to enforce that policy by legislation adapted to its purpose. The courts are without authority either to declare such policy, or, when it is declared by the Legislature, to override it. If the laws passed are seen to have a reasonable relation to a proper legislative purpose, and are neither arbitrary nor discriminatory, the requirements of due process are satisfied, and judicial determination to that effect renders a court functus officio." That declaration and decision should control the present case. They are irreconcilable with the decision and most that was said in the Adkins case. They have left the court free of its restriction as a precedent, and free to declare that the choice of the particular form of regulation by which grave economic maladjustments are to be remedied is for legislatures and not the courts.

In the years which have intervened since the Adkins case we have had opportunity to learn that a wage is not always the resultant of free bargaining between employers and employes; that it may be one forced upon employes by their economic necessities and upon employers by the most ruthless of their competitors. We have had opportunity to perceive more clearly that a wage insufficient to support the worker does not visit its consequences upon him alone; that it may affect profoundly the entire economic structure of society and, in any case, that it casts on every taxpayer, and on government itself, the burden of solving the problems of poverty, subsistence, health and morals of large numbers in the community.

It is not for the courts to resolve doubts whether the remedy by wage regulation is as efficacious as many believe, or is better than some other, or is better even than the blind operation of uncontrolled economic forces. The Legislature must be free to choose unless government is to be rendered impotent.

I know of no rule or practice by which the arguments advanced in support of an application for certiorari restrict our choice between conflicting precedents in deciding a question of constitutional law which the petition, if granted, requires us to answer. Here the question which the petition specifically presents is whether the New York statute contravenes the fourteenth amendment. In addition, the petition assigns as a reason for granting it that "the construction and application of the Constitution of the United States and a prior decision" of this court "are necessarily involved," and again, that "the circumstances prevailing under which the New York law was enacted call for reconsideration of the Adkins case in the light of the New York act and conditions aimed to be remedied thereby." Unless we are now to construe and apply the fourteenth amendment without regard to our decisions since the Adkins case, we could not rightly avoid its reconsideration even if it were not asked. We should follow our decision in the Nebbia case and leave the selection and the methods of the solution of the problems to which the statute is addressed where it seems to me the Constitution has left them, to the legislative branch of the Government.

Labor Stunned By Verdict, but Will Battle On

Green Voices Hope Way Can Be Found to Get Valid Minimum Wage.

Organized labor generally, and especially labor in the eight States with minimum wage laws, staggered yesterday under one of the most severe blows it has yet received from the Supreme Court—the decision holding that States have no constitutional right to enact such laws.

"The decision," said William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, "can only be regarded as another blow to labor and its friends throughout the entire country.

"The one ray of hope to labor arising out of the decision is to be found in the 5 to 4 opinion of the court. We hope that a study of the decision will show that a way can still be found to enact a minimum wage law which can and will be held constitutional.

"Labor Will Fight On."

"Labor will fight on. It can not and will not assume a defeatist attitude in its fight for the enactment of social legislation."

While Green did not so indicate, it is expected that labor's fight will take the form of a demand for a Constitutional amendment making such laws possible.

Reaction from various sections of the country, as reported by the Associated Press, follows:

Albany, N. Y.—Gov. Lehman and Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews expressed regret. The latter insisted that the fight for protection of wage earners must be renewed. He said the decision was "a solar plexus blow, but not a knockout."

Ohio Law Affected.

Columbus, Ohio—Attorney General Bricker said Ohio's minimum wage law was in effect invalidated by the decision. The Ohio law is almost word for word the same as that of New York.

Concord, N. H.—Attorney General Thomas P. Cheney said he believed the decision would have no immediate effect upon New Hampshire's law. New Hampshire had joined New York in defense of the law. It is questionable, however, whether the New Hampshire law would be upheld in a court contest.

Hartford, Conn.—Morgan B. Mooney, State deputy labor commissioner, said the decision was a great setback in efforts to thwart sweatshop operators. The Connecticut law is almost identical with that of New York.

International Wedding at St. Matthew's

Bride's Sister Is Maid of Honor; Capital Society Views Ceremony.

Yesterday afternoon members of Capital society attended another international marriage at St. Mtthew's Church when Miss Valerie Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, became the bride of Mr. Jean R. L. deSibour, son of the Viscount and Viscountess de Sibour. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock when His Excellency, the Apostolic Delegate, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, officiated, assisted by Mgr. Edward L. Buckey, pastor of St. Matthew's Church and the Rev. Cornelius Dacey, pastor of St. Paul's Church.

The church was simply decorated with palms and ferns, and the altar, which was banked with Easter lilies, was lighted with tall cathedral candles. The pews reserved for the members of the family, diplomatic and official society, were marked by large bouquets of white peonies with white ribbon closing off the pews.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin fashioned on princess lines with a high cowl neckline and three-quarter length bell-shaped sleeves. Her square court train, which fell from the waistline, was trimmed with rare old lace, and her voluminous tulle veil was held in place by a coronet of braided satin and a short face veil which was thrown back after the ceremony. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies.

Sister Maid of Honor.

The maid of honor was Miss Patricia Prochnik, sister of the bride, who wore a gown of tucked white net over white satin made with a long full skirt and small puffed sleeves. Her small close-fitting hat with a square visor was of white net and she carried an arm bouquet of white peonies.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Millard F. West, jr., Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, Miss Caroline Johnson and Miss Elizabeth Walker, all of Washington. They were gowned alike in white net frocks, fashioned with long full skirts and pointed capes, and small hats like that of the maid of honor, and carried arm bouquets of white peonies.

Mr. J. Blaise de Sibour, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man and the ushers were Mr. Henri de Sibour, another brother of the bridegroom; Mr. Richard Bolling, jr., Mr. John R. McLean, Mr. Thomas Moorhead and Mrs. John Reyburn, all of Washington; Mr. Thomas P. Good, of Garden City, Long Island; Mr. Francis P. Garvan, jr., of New York, and Mr. H. Lausat Clement, of Haverford, Pa.

Reception Held.

Following the ceremony a small reception was held at the legation, where the young couple were assisted in receiving by Mme. Prochnik, mother of the bride, who wore a gown of dark blue net fashioned with a long full skirt and short sleeves with a white organdy collar and cuffs. A narrow girdle of dark blue and emerald green grosgrain ribbon marked the waistline. With this she wore a turban of white violets and a nose veil of dark blue and a corsage of gardenias pinned at her waist. Viscountess de Sibour, mother of the bridegroom, who also assisted, wore a gown of beige chiffon with a hat and accessories to match and a corsage of gardenias.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Preston James, of Brookline, Mass., grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Gilmore, of Springfield, Mass.; the Governor of Pennsylvania and Mrs. George Earle; Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Hechscher, of Strafford, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clement, of Haverford, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan, of New York; the Norwegian consul general at Montreal; Mme. Steen and Mrs. Hamilton Lamar, of New York.

Miss Moore Wed To Mr. Detwiler

Miss Margaret Mary Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Moore, became the bride of Mr. Samuel Detwiler, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Detwiler, of Clarendon, Va., yesterday morning at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white traveling frock with white accessories. Miss Jane Moore, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant and Mr. Robert Detwiler, brother of the bridegroom, the best man.

A breakfast was held at noon for the members of the two families at the home of the bride's parents, and later Mr. Detwiler and his bride left for a wedding trip. On their return they will make their home on Connecticut avenue. Mr. Detwiler is employed at the Bureau of Standards.

Envoy's Daughter Wed Yesterday

Mr. and Mrs. Jean Raymond de Sibour, whose wedding took place yesterday afternoon at St. Matthew's Church. Mrs. de Sibour is the former Miss Valerie Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik. Mr. de Sibour is the son of Viscount and Viscountess J. Henri de Sibour.

Amy Chandler Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Victor Krulak, U. S. N.

Miss Amy Chandler, daughter of Commander William Dwight Chandler, jr., U. S. N., and Mrs. Chandler, was married to Lieut. Victor H. Krulak, United States Marine Corps, yesterday afternoon at 4:30 at Clieveden, 2901 Grant road, the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Charles W. Richardson. Only members of the family and a small company of intimate friends of the bride's parents were present for the ceremony which was performed by Commander W. N. Thomas, chaplain at the United States Naval Academy, on the broad lawn beneath stately oak trees.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin. Her veil was old rose point lace worn by her great-grandmother, Mrs. Chandler. She wore her Grandmother Richardson's pearl necklace which was given to her grandmother by her grandfather on their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Her bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The best man was Mr. Charles S. Walsh, of Annapolis, and the ushers were Ensign W. F. A. Wendt, U. S. N., and Lieut. H. W. Ruse, jr., U. S. Marine Corps.

Lieut. and Mrs. Krulak will motor to San Diego, Calif., stopping at Denver to visit the bridegroom's parents, who were detained from the wedding by illness in their family.

On her maternal side, the bride is a granddaughter of the late Dr. Charles W. Richardson and a great-granddaughter of Mr. John H. Small and Mr. C. E. F. Richardson, two of the early businessmen of Washington. On her paternal side she is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Chandler, of Concord, N. H., and the great-granddaughter of the late Senator William E. Chandler, who was Secretary of the Navy during the Administration of President Arthur.

The bridegroom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Krulak, of Denver, Colo., was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1934 and has been stationed at the academy during the past year. He was captain of the academy crew during his senior year, and acted as assistant coach of this year's crews.

Among those at the wedding from out of the city were Mrs. William D. Chandler, of Concord, N. H., the mother of Commander Chandler; Mrs. Robert S. Fogg, of Watertown, Mass.; Mrs. Middleton Semmes Guest, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Walsh, Commander and Mrs. Shafroth and Miss Shafroth, Commander and Mrs. T. S. King, jr., all of Annapolis; Capt. and Mrs. H. M. Jensen and Capt. and Mrs. C. W. C. Bunker, of Newport, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Sasser and Dr. Sasser, of Upper Marlboro, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey Smith, of Baltimore, Md., and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Hayne Ellis and family.

Mr. Robert B. Filley To Wed Miss Roberts

Mr. and Mrs. Bertrand H. Roberts announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia, to Mr. Robert B. Filley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur J. Filley, of San Marino, Calif.

The wedding will take place at Glenmoore Farm, Va., the summer home of the bride's parents, on Friday, July 3.

Have Party Tomorrow.

The garden party at the home of Mrs. James J. Davis, 3012 Massachusetts avenue, tomorrow afternoon, will be held indoors in case of rain, the League of Republican Women has announced. Mrs. Harry Hull is in charge of the fete.

Dr. and Mrs. Abram Simon will sail from New York, on Saturday, on the Santa Paula, for California via the Panama Canal. They will return to Washington by way of the Canadian Rockies the latter part of August.

Sisters Chosen As Bridesmaids

Mr. E. G. Davis Will Marry Miss Anne Richardson on June 29.

Senora de Irigoyen, wife of the Financial Attache of the Argentine Embassy, and her sister, Mrs W. Peters Blanc, of New York, will be bridesmaids at the wedding on June 29 of their brother, Mr. Eaton Greenwood Davis, and Miss Anne Avis Richardson, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Arthur Howard Richardson, of Schenectady, N. Y. The wedding will take place at 4:30 p m. in St. George's Church, Schenectady.

Miss Betty Barnes, of Manistee Mich., will be maid of honor, and the bride's other attendants will be Miss Priscilla Rice, of Schnectady, and Miss Elizabeth Lee MacLeod, of Milton, Mass.

Mr. Davis' father, Mr. William H. Davis, of New York, will be his son's best man. The ushers will include Senor Irigoyen, Mr. W. Peters Blanc, of New York; Mr. Herbert Jackson, of Greenwich, Conn., and Messrs. Howard Larsen Richardson, of Beverley, Mass., and Arthur B. Richardson, of Washington, brothers of Miss Richardson.

Ensign R. S. Stuart Weds Miss Langohr

Ensign R. S. Stuart, assigned to the U. S. S. Arkansas now at Annapolis, Md., and Miss Robnette Louise Langohr, duaghter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore L. Langohr, were married yesterday afternoon in the bride's home, 4220 Schley avenue, Bradbury Heights, Md.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. George D. Fowler, of Glendale, Calif., a former resident of Roanoke, Va.

Lieut. R. D. Sutton, also a member of the Arkansas crew, served as best man, and Miss Mabel Sargent, of Annapolis, was maid of honor.

Senor Padilla Off On Unexpected Trip To Home in Spain

The Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, Senor Don Ramon Padilla y de Satrustegui, left Washington rather unexpectedly yesterday morning to return to Spain. He will sail on Saturday aboard the Vulcania, and will be gone for three months, during which he will visit his family in Spain and take trips through Europe.

Mr. Padilla's father was, until several years ago, Ambassador to this country.

International Art Forum Entertainment Is Planned

Mme. Agasta Caudullo and Mrs. Antonina Borzi will entertain members of the International Art Forum tonight at their home at 1604 Buchanan street.

Dr. Harry B. Humphrey will deliver an illustrated talk in the garden on "French Canada," and Mrs. Edith Hoffman Jones, well known coloratura soprano, will sing several songs and operatic selections.

Chief Chaplain of Navy Performs Ceremony on Destroyer.

In a ceremony on board the U. S. S. Leary, Miss Ernestine Bernardin, daughter of Mrs. Henry-Bedford Jones, of New York, was married to Ensign Edward Elias Grimm yesterday at 4 p. m. The service was performed by the chief chaplain of the Navy, Capt. Edward P. Duff. Ensign Grimm is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Grim, of York, Pa.

The couple marched through an aisle of flags and flowers to an improvised altar. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Alfred L. Bernardin, wore a white gown of silk organdy trimmed with ruffles and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of sweetheart roses, forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley. Miss Evelyn McPherson, of Grand Junction, Colo., was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Nancy Webber, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Miss Jane Burke, of Mobile, Ala. Ensign Grimm was attended by the officers of the Leary.

Following the ceremony, the bride and bridegroom marched through an arch of swords held by the officers of the destroyer. A reception was later held in the Pan American Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

The bride attended the University of California and, for the past year, has been studying at the King-Smith Studio in Washington. Ensign Grimm was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1933.

Holmstroms to Sail For European Visit

Recently Married Couple Will Leave Thursday.

Dr. and Mrs. Carl G. Holmstrom, whose marriage on May 11 has just been announced, will sail on Thursday for Europe, where Dr. Holmstrom will study. On their return they will be at the Highlands Apartment until September 15, when they will move into a home they are remodeling at Nineteenth and N streets.

Mrs. Holstrom is the former Mrs. Emma Berry Lee, daughter of Mr. Edgar P. Berry, of Georgetown, and the late Mrs. Berry. Dr. Holmstrom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Holmstrom, of Sweden.

Marian McCormick Is Wed to Mr. Gray

The Chapel of National Park Seminary was the scene Saturday of the wedding of Miss Marian Ruth McCormick, daughter of Mr. William D. McCormick and the late Estella Lenhart McCormick, of Uniontown, Pa., to Mr. James Dunlap Gray, son of Judge and Mrs. James H. Gray, of Pittsburgh.

Only the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom were present at the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, Chaplain of the House of Representatives. The bride's only attendant was Miss Jane Henderson, of Kingston, Canada. Mr. George Held, of Pittsburgh, was best man.

Mrs. Gray attended Wilson College and was graduated from the University of Michigan, where she was a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Sigma Delta Phi, Sigma Alpha Iota and Kappa Kappa Gamma. For the last two years she has been head of the voice department at National Park Seminary.

Mr. Gray is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh Law School and a member of Beta Gamma Sigma, and Phi Alpha Delta.

After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Gray will be at home in Pittsburgh, where Mr. Gray is practicing law.

Mrs. Grace Miller Wed To Mr. Charles Ammann

The marriage of Mrs. Grace Miller to Mr. Charles Ammann, both of Washington, took place Saturday evening at 5 o'clock in the residence of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Taylor, at Berwyn Heights, Md.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a problem that I should like to have your help on. I am a man 29 years old and have been in love once or twice before but have never married. I have always lived at home. The lady whom I love and would lik to marry is 36 years old, is a divorcee and has two children, a son 16, and a daughter a littler older.

* * * *

I have known this lady about ten years, but we never thought seriously of each other until about a year ago. Since then we have been keeping fairly steady company. We are both very sympathetic in our likes and dislikes.

* * * *

We love each other very dearly and think we would have a fair chance of being happy if we were married. But due to the differences in our ages and experiences in life we are not altogether sure and would like to have your opinion as to uor chances for happiness if we should marry. Thanking you in advance for any constructive comment you may see fit to give, I am, yours truly, C. T.

Fears Unfounded.

DEAR C. T.: I see no reason why your marriage should not be successful and happy. The difference in your respective ages is nothing to worry about. After all, Elizabeth Barrett Browning was some years older than her husband and theirs was one of the greatest love matches in all recorded history. As to the difference in your respective experiences, that matters not at all if the woman's experiences have given her an understanding, a sympathy, a poise and balance of mind and spirit entirely becoming to her years; and if you are entirely prepared to accept her for what she is today and be in a measure grateful for those incidents in her life which have contributed to the sum total of her lovable personality. She may even make you the better wife for having covered the ground she already has covered.

* * * *

I would say that you two have much in your favor in that you are, as you say, sympathetic in your likes and dislikes, which means that you possess mutual compatability of temperament; in that you have known each other over a period of years and hence are entirely familiar with each other's background; and in that you both are willing to let your heads rule your hearts when momentous decisions affecting the destinies of each are to be made.

I might even say that your chances of being truly happy in marriage with this woman are greater than they might be with a younger woman who is comparatively untried by life; a woman who might not understand what is expected of a wife in the long pull of marriage; a woman whose patience, wisdom and sensible appreciation of all the good there is to be found in marriage had not been refined in the crucible of experience. M. H.

* * * *

Card Etiquette.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH, I am a subscriber to he Washington Post and I read your column daily. The thought has just occurred to me that you could help me solve my problem. Let us state the case this way: I was born Jane Smith. I married John Blank. Later I was widowed by death. I remarried, my second husband being Eric James. (These names, you understand, are all fictitious.) I have now divorced my second husband.

* * * *

What would be the proper name for my formal visiting cards under these circumstances? Your advice will be greatly appreciated. Very sincerely yours,

JANE SMITH JAMES.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. JAMES: In every case a divorcee uses her own maiden surname as a prefix to her divorced husband's surname on calling cards. In other words, your cards would properly be engraved, "Mrs. Smith James." In signing correspondence to persons whom you do not know well, you would sign yourself "Jane James," and underneath, in parenthesis, you would add, "Mrs. Smith James" as a matter of information. Whenever your name is given to social lists of any kind it would be "Mrs. Smith Jones." In business or professional circles you might be known as "Mrs. Jane Smith James," or just "Mrs. Jane James," unless, of course, you prefer to follow the suit of the Lucy Stoners and be "Miss Jane Smith." M. H.

Bandeau Is Style For the Midseason

Paris (U.P.).—Schiaparelli, always full of surprises, has a new bag of tricks in her mid-season collection. For evening she pushes the hair right back from the forehead with a silk bandeau which she calls a "Liane."

Gland Swelling Still Baffling To Physicians

Hodgkin's Disease One of Ills Unconquerable by Medical Craft.

OCCASIONALLY medical science indulges in a little prideful boasting, justified perhaps, when we consider that many aforetime epidemics have been "cabin'd, cribb'd, confined," if not scotched entirely. But there are so many distressing afflictions that still baffle physicians that the garb of humility must be worn for many years to come.

One of these unconquered diseases is named after Thomas Hodgkin (Hodgkin's disease), who first described the condition more than 100 years ago. It is characterized by painless enlargement of the lymph glands and is often accompanied by fever. It occurs more frequently in the young, although older individuals are sometimes affected.

The tumors increase slowly in size and for many months there may be no general symptoms other than a severe itching. As a rule, the situation progresses until most of the lymph tissue in the body is affected. The irregular shaped masses appear beneath the skin in many parts of the body. The duration varies from one month to three years, although careful management may prolong life seven to eight years.

Because of pressure other structures may be involved. In fact, an early symptom may be difficulty in breathing. Swallowing may be interfered with, as well as the function of speech. Sometimes nerves will be pressed upon, giving rise to pain. If the tumors compress blood vessels and prevent the return of venous circulation to the heart, there may be considerable swelling in one or both extremities.

The temperature, as a rule, is not high, rarely rising above 101 degrees F. It is often of the stepladder type, dropping each day or each two or three days to normal. In severe cases that proceed to a rapid termination, however, a violent fever is observed.

Patches of pigment may become visible on the skin or there may be a general browning of the entire body. As soon as the disease is well established constitutional symptoms develop—loss of weight, weakness, and anemia.

No treatment thus far discovered seems to influence the course of the disease for more than a short time.

The drug of greatest value is arsenic. This has been employed in various forms and apparently gives beneficial though not permanent results. Surgical removal of the glands has been tried, but has been without avail in checking the progress of the malady.

Science some day will conquer Hodgkin's disease, which a few authorities now believe to be a second or third cousin to cancer.

Every Plant Is Planned In An English Garden

Gardening is a favorite diversion with the average British woman, according to Mrs. Frank Gresham (above), founder of the garden group of the Forum Club of London. Mrs. Gresham is here to attend the current conference of the A. C. W. W.

Visitor at Countrywoman's Meeting Says British Dig Daily as Means of Interest and Consolation; Tells of Royal Family's Joy in Blooms.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHILE THE AVERAGE American woman spends most of her spare time selecting hats and dresses for her wardrobe, the English woman lavishes her attention on her garden—planning and planting it, walking and digging in it daily and tending roses, hedges and herbs as if they were friends.

This slant on an absorbing interest among her countrywomen was given yesterday at the Dodge Hotel by Mrs. Frank Gresham, founder and president of the garden group of the Forum Club, one of the leading women's organizations in London.

In Washington to attend the conference of the Associated Countrywomen of the World, Mrs. Gresham is one of the representatives from North Wales, where she has a home in Criccieth.

Discussing the Britishwoman's devotion to her garden, Mrs. Gresham spoke of the latter as "both an absorbing interest and a consolation." "We always plant our gardens with an eye to the picture as a whole," she said. Design, color and balance always come in for their share of attention."

Every rose, every hydrahgea, every herb has a reason for springing up where it does in the English garden, said Mrs. Gresham, stressing that no seed is sewn helter-skelter, that no posey is planted without considering it will add to the whole.

Every Thing Is Balanced.

"Balance is one thing that should never be overlooked," she went on. "Probably the chief reason the typical English garden is famous is the fact it is designed so that each side, each corner, is in equilibrium with the opposite side or corner. When planting most of us keep in mind the adage, 'Take care of the corners and the middle will take care of itself.'"

Since the color of flowers used in any plot is a matter of personal preference, Mrs. Gresham believes a garden is a fair indication of the owner's personality—as much so, at least, as the rugs, curtains and furniture in a home.

She stressed that the "British love of making flowers grow" is not restricted to women; that it is a common bond of interest between king and cockney, between the lady who lives in a mansion and a maid of lowly birth residing in a cottage.

She said she had often seen the late King George and Queen Mary walking in their gardens at Buckingham Palace, looking for the first crocuses. She mentioned, also, that in the first few hours after the death of King George, the Queen seeking consolation went to the conservatory and the gardens at Sandringham to gather the King's favorite flowers."

"Later, one of the first things King Edward did at Buckingham Palace was to arrange two little gardens for Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose, and to tell them they must tend them each day. You know, after all," she added, "our ruler is a typical English country gentleman. He loves his horses, his home and his gardens."

Princess Heads Garden Club.

Mrs. Gresham, mentioned also, that Princess Marie Louise, granddaughter of Queen Victoria, had taken much interest in the garden group of the Forum Club. The group is a part of the club's overseas section, which the princess herself founded for wives of political officers in the British Dominions and Colonies, returning to London from long and trying experiences.

Among the prominent members belonging to the garden group are Lady Seton, chairman of the National Garden Guild, and Lady Martineau, widely known in England and America for her garden books written when she was Mrs. Philip Martineau.

Commenting on American gardens she has observed on this, her first visit to the United States, Mrs. Gresham said, "They are beautiful! Quite as lovely as our English gardens. I have been very much surprised at the beauty of both the American countryside and the cities. Furthermore, I have been amazed at the refinement of mind and tastes of all women I have met here.

"Some years ago when our garden group entertained presidents of the American Garden clubs attending the London meeting of the English-Speaking Union, I was very much impressed with them. But I thought they were probably exceptional women. Now, I am beginning to believe all American women are exceptional."

Attic Playroom For Children Easy to Build

Movable Ladder Designed to Allow 'Perilous' Indoor Games.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MANY YEARS ago when houses were still the fashion in cities, and even people of moderate means could boast of three or four stories of their own, Mr. Jones evolved a delightful playroom for his growing children.

It was an empty room on the top floor. At either end he had a carpenter erect two solid uprights, and on these placed a ladder, which could be lowered or raised or tipped at will, by adjustisg wooden pegs in holes made for the purpose. The room became the neighborhood center for children, and continued to do as a gymnasium until the youngest child had reached his teens.

Ladder Effective.

Certainly no playroom could be simpler or easier and cheaper to contrive. The ladder was used for every purpose under the sun. Balance was gained by walking along the side pieces or on the rungs. Arm muscles and backs were stretched and exercised by raising the ladder and using the rungs as traveling rings, or to chin the bar, or even to "skin the cat."

Perilous games of tag were played up and down and around the ladder and uprights. Small bodies became limber from weaving through the rungs. Sometimes the ladder became a boat or train to be loaded with luggage and passengers.

Backyards for Play.

Of course, for most city dwellers today an indoor gymnasium of this kind is out of the question. But there are still backyards and basements where by a little co-operation the neighbors could, with very little outlay, erect just such an apparatus for the youngsters.

The simpler it is, the better. Solidity and strength and smooth lumber which will not come off in splinters are the prime requisites. Of course, the longer and wider such a ladder is, the better, since it is then adapted to big as well as little children.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Softening Lotion Removes Excessive Cream From Face.

By Mignon.

Posed by Frances Farmer.

THE ONE THING that women try to eliminate when they take their home facial is that sticky, greasy feeling that follows the application of a very heavy "nourishing" cream. It is absolutely necessary, especially for a dry skin individual, to use a heavy cream and to allow it to remain on the face long enough to have a softening effect. As I have said so many times before—clean the face thoroughly in which ever way you prefer, then apply the heavier cream before you take your warm bath. This allows it at least more time than most hurried women today give to this part of their facial treatment.

Before applying a foundation cream, the thing to do then, is to use a skin balm. One I like that has no bite in it and does its work very well is a milky white lotion which I can use successfully on a very sensitive skin.

I take a small pad of cotton after pouring some of the lotion into the palm of the left hand. Dip the cotton in the lotion and just gently wipe it over your face. This will make the excess cream so much easier to remove with tissues without rubbing your face too violently—and this is something you should never do.

Next apply a good foundation of one sort of another, then makeup, then face powder, then lipstick, then buy a gardenia and pin it on your coat lapel. The effect will do something for you, I promise.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post NAtional 4200, branch 323.

Cotton Gains Favor For Summer Wear

Paris (U.P.).—Practical cotton materials that are cool and washable will be used for every occasion this summer if Vera Borea has anything to say about it. Her midsummer collection includes piques, linens, cloque cottons and organdies made up into everything from beach clothes to formal evening gowns.

Beach clothes are equally appropriate on the street or at the seashore, as the addition of a trim skirt and short bolero jacket turns beach rompers into a tailored suit.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE.

GRACE IVAR felt the tension in the office, although Ethel didn't confide in her. Part of the tension she knew was caused by Walter's infatuation for Brenda, and part by something else. What the something else was she didn't know. But there was some danger. Ethel had hinted that much.

"Be careful what you leave in your desk," Ethel had said some days ago. "When you go home at night leave everything in order. You know what I mean by order?"

Grace knew of course. Nothing incriminating in any of her drawers—but she was bright enough never to do that. Anything that might be incriminating she took in to Ethel, and Ethel took care of it. There were no lists in any of Grace's files, and no telephone numbers on the pad in her top drawer. The telephone numbers that were important she carried in her purse always on a slip of paper which could be destroyed immediately.

Her bank account was in excellent condition. It wasn't kept in town. She cashed her checks as soon as she got them and sent the bills through registered mail to Oakland, where she had lived before she joined up with Ethel and Walter.

If anything happened, and it never had before, she would always have her money out of it, no matter when she went back for it. Fifty thousand dollars socked away, a nice sum for a girl after four years of work, which wasn't work at all. And she had lived too; lived mighty well.

In her purse was an adequate supply of cash for emergencies, $500 in tens and twenties, pinned to the false lining. Her first bonus check had gone into an emergency fund.

"We have to be ready to leave at any time," Ethel had said to her four years ago.

Ready to Go.

Grace took that literally. In each place where the Jason Enterprises took offices, she was ready to go at any time, at a moment's notice. In the coat closet of Ethel's office was an overnight case, which contained necessary articles of travel, so she wouldn't have to go home and pack.

Ethel also had two coats in the closet. She had had two coats in all closets in all the buildings where the Jason Enterprises had been registered, one winter coat and one summer coat. Ethel had a bag, too, the same size as Grace's, and in it were the same things. Grace had looked inside the bag. Walter had no bag in the closet. Ethel couldn't make him bring one to the office.

So they were all prepared, even George Rush. His things were ready in his office.

Grace knew, too, what the little square sheet metal contraption was that was beside the bags in Ethel's closet. She had never seen it used, and at first she had thought it might be a safe—although not a good one at that. Then Ethel had told her what it was for. The box was to destroy confidential company papers in case of emergencies.

Grace had instructions what to do if Walter and Ethel didn't happen to be in when papers were to be destroyed. She was to take everything out of the file marked Q in the top drawer of Ethel's filing cabinet. She was to put the papers in the box, over the documents. She was to be careful not to get any of the liquid on her hands. After the whole bottle was poured on top of the papers she was to close the cover of the box, and leave it. Under no circumstances was she to open the lid again.

George Rush had the same instructions, if he should happen to be in the office when anything came up.

Every morning for the past week, alarmed by the growing tension she could feel in the office, Grace left her apartment absolutely in order. The garments she chose each morning to wear, were garments she could wear traveling, dark clothes that would be inconspicuous.

"There's something up," she said to George Friday morning. "It isn't only that Walter is going around with Brenda. I've seen Walter interested in girls before, crazy about them, and Ethel has been all right. Well, not exactly all right, but well enough. She's never been like this before."

"Yes, I guess there is something. Ethel's been down here for the last three nights. I've caught her here when I opened up, asleep on Walter's couch. She said not to say anything to Walter about it." Ethel's father shook his head slowly. He didn't understand his daughter, and never had.

"She must go out as soon as you come in," Grace said, for George opened up, as he called it, at 8:30 every morning, and Grace came at 9. "Ethel hasn't been here for the last three mornings when I've come. She's come in at 10, as usual."

"She goes out as soon as I come in, goes home for a shower, and gets freshened up."

"Did she tell you anything definite?"

"She never does. She never tells me anything," George returned bitterly.

Information.

He went back to his office and Ethel came in a few minutes later. Her face to Grace seemed haggard, gray, but her eyes were as bright and sharp as ever.

"No important mail," Grace said, and Ethel nodded as she went into her office.

She was terribly tired, and when she was at her own desk, she put her head in her arms wearily. She had just started to relax when the phone rang. It was a stenographer at the Delvyn's Jewelry Co. whom she had bribed to let her know when Walter was buying jewelry. It seemed that Walter had been in the store the day before, and ordered a diamond brooch. Three thousand dollars was the price, and the piece was to be engraved on the back, "B. F."

Ethel thanked the girl for her information, and made a note on a pad in front of her to send the girl a check for $25, the price of the information.

Today, however, she was too tired to be interested in the fact that Walter was buying a brooch for Brenda, too tired and too discouraged. If she had had her way, they would have closed up the office a week ago, been clear of all the fear that was following her.

But Walter wouldn't listen. Yesterday she had begged him again to leave, and he had laughed. "There's nothing to be afraid of, Ethel. You're making a fool of yourself."

The phone rang again, and it was Walter. He had an appointment scheduled for 1 o'clock with a prospect, and wanted Ethel to call Brenda. He outlined his plans fully, and when he was finished and the connection broken, Ethel called her own apartment and talked to Brenda. She reoutlined Walter's plans and told the girl what to wear.

Grace came into the office at intervals during the morning. On all her visits, she found Ethel staring blankly at the door, and if Ethel answered some question, it was without any interest.

At 12:30 Grace's buzzer rang. Ethel was no longer listless, lifeless, she was her old dynamic self. "George gone to lunch?" she asked sharply from the file cabinet where her fingers were running through some correspondence.

"Not yet."

"We're leaving immediately. Get your bag and coat. Tell George to get his. You are to take the bus to Chicago and George is to take the train there. You register at the Palmer House under the name of Evelyn Campbell, and wait for more instructions. George at the Stevens under the name of George Martin. Now go."

Going.

Grace went and Ethel took her papers to the closet and put them into the sheet metal box. When she finished pouring the bottle of chemical over them and closed down the lid, she looked at her wrist watch. Twenty of minutes of 1. She put on her hat and coat and got her packed bag from the chair where George had put it. Through the open door, she saw her father leave with a small brief case, and Grace a few moments later. At exactly quarter of 1, she called Walter's apartment. Her conversation with him was short but to the point. "I've just had confidential information about Orth. I can't tell you about it, now. George and Grace have already left. I'm leaving now. I've called Rose and Brenda. You meet me in New York, the arrangements there are the same as we planned. Everything is tended to here."

She hung up the phone right away, smiling to herself. Then at exactly 10 minutes of 1 she called Rose. Brenda had left as Ethel knew.

She was very calm as she picked up her bag and left the office just as it was, unlocked. She had played a trick on Walter, but he wouldn't know it for several days, not until she got good and ready to tell him.

For she had no further confidential report on Orth. She was acting only on a hunch. If Walter refused to listen to reason, he had to be tricked into getting away. He would meet her tomorrow in New York.

Austrian Chief Off for Venice; Pact Rumored

Schuschnigg Is Reported Seeking Conferences With Mussolini.

By the United Press.

Vienna, June 1.—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, confronted with the threat of civil war as a result of his coup d'etat which ousted Prince Ernst von Starhemberg as co-dictator, left suddenly for Venice, Italy, tonight, presumably to confer with Italian authorities, including Premier Benito Mussolini.

Starhemberg's private army, the Heimwehr, numbering 120,000, is awaiting the "opportune moment" to restore its leader to power.

Peace Formula Sought.

Vice Chancellor Eduard Baar von Baarenfels will be acting chancellor in Schuschnigg's absence.

Some observers believe Mussolini and Schuschnigg will seek a formula for Austro-German peace, thus enabling establishment of an anti-French, anti-Soviet front if Paris and Moscow continue to press for application of sanctions against Italy.

It was believed in some circles that Il Duce will give his full support to Schuschnigg as new dictator of Austria in preference to Starhemberg, commonly regarded as Mussolini's protege.

May Shift His Support.

It was recalled that whereas Starhemberg is irreconcilably opposed to German Chancellor Adolf Hitler, Schuschnigg was the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss' envoy to Munich during the Austro-German peace parleys in the summer of 1934. Starhemberg's anti-Hitler policies disrupted the parleys.

Thus Mussolini may shift his support to Schuschnigg as more profitable for Italy, it was said.

Italian-Austrian Parley.

Rome, June 1 (U.P.).—Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, will visit Austrian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg "somewhere away from Rome within the next few days," reliable sources said tonight. Suvich received British Ambassador Sir Eric Drummond this evening. The meeting had no political significance, it was announced officially.

Richmond Slayer To Get Hearing

Richmond Va., June 1 (AP).—Irving Atkins, 31-year-old Dumbarton iron worker, who told police he was "glad" he shot and killed Mrs. Kennie May Childress, 31, here last night, will be given a preliminary hearing in police court tomorrow.

Atkins, who police said confessed to shooting Mrs. Childress on the sidewalk in front of her home, was captured in the Fulton section of Richmond this morning and formally charged with the slaying.

Atkins and Mrs. Childress had been companions since the woman's separation from her husband eight years ago, but they had been on "bad terms" for some time, Detective Capt. A. S. Wright said.

Miss Lottie Moss, who witnessed the shooting, told police Mrs. Childress was sitting in an automobile waiting for a friend when Atkins approached the car. Miss Moss said she heard Mrs. Childress cry and a man run across a field as she fell.

Zioncheck in Psychopathic Ward

Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, shown yesterday as he waited in Gallinger Hospital for a sanity examination. He was committed to the institution by city officials after a day spent eluding police and breaking traffic laws.

Zioncheck Faces Sanity Test

Washington State Democrat said he was voluntarily seeking a sanity examination.

He agreed to accompany the officers peaceably, shouting as they grabbed him:

"I'll go with you—all I want is a fair examination."

But then he broke away and tried to climb into his car. Detective Sergt. Joseph Sincavitz, a 200-pounder, grappled with him for a moment and was joined by Detective Sergt. A. N. Tolson. Between them they succeeded in getting Zioncheck in the rear seat of a police car.

Almost immediately, the Representative started to scream and yell. He looked at the floor of the car and shouted:

"Hand grenades!! Hand grenades! You can't bluff me!"

What he described as "hand grenades," however, were tear gas bombs. He was finally reassured and slumped back exhausted. With a motorcycle escort leading the way, he was taken to Gallinger Hospital where a room in the mental observation ward had been prepared.

Earlier in the day, Zioncheck left his apartment at Harvard street and sped to the White House. Before he arrived, however, he drove through at least six red traffic lights, according to a passenger, and at Seventeenth and I streets northwest, swung his speeding machine onto the sidewalk to avoid a traffic jam. He drove along the sidewalk for half a block. At H street, he stopped to drink two bottles of beer.

Reaching the White House, he parked on the wrong side of the street and hurried into the executive offices, demanding to see the President. Told the President was not in, Zioncheck handed a briefcase to a guard. The case contained two empty beer bottles, a can of mothballs and two ping-pong balls.

"These are for the President," he said, departing.

His next stop was the office of District Attorney Leslie Garnett. There he sought arrest warrants for Vice President Garner, whom he accused of harboring his missing wife, and Mrs. Benjamin Scott Young, his landlady, whom he accused of stealing a watch.

Garnett's assistants instructed him to go to the office in Police Court. There he was in conference with Assistant District Attorney Karl Kindelberger for nearly two hours. The warrants were refused.

Zioncheck, with a crowd of more than 200 spectators at his heels, emerged from the courthouse and entered his roadster, parked in front between two "No Parking" signs. On the windshield of the car was a "courtesy card," bearing a Police Department welcome to the city and politely warning him not to park there.

And then, while uniformed policemen cleared a way, he jammed his car in gear and crashed into the rear of another car. He backed up, narrowly missing bystanders and newsmen, and raced away from the curb at high speed, driving through a red signal light at Sixth and D streets northwest.

Again he went to the White House, arriving after several near collisions in downtown traffic. En route, he drove at a rapid pace along F street northwest, and at Twelfth street almost ran down a traffic policeman. At the White House, the President was "still out." It was then that Zioncheck went to the Naval Hospital.

British Launch Drive on Reds In Arab Dispute

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, June 1.—The British government launched a vigorous drive against Communist agitators, coincident with reports the Arab general strike is being financed by a foreign power.

It was reported that authorities discovered pamphlets, written in English and allegedly signed by the central committee of the Communist Party for Palestine, inciting British troops to revolt.

Posters also were said to have been discovered saying that "all Jews are enemies of Europe and Christianity," and urging Arab insurgents to continue their anti-Semitic attacks, which in the last month and a half have resulted in at least 55 deaths.

Authorities established a military concentration camp at Auja Hafir, desert outpost near the Egyptian frontier, where agitators will be held.

The camp will be guarded by the British desert camel corps.

The Hebrew Press said: "It is obvious that foreign funds are available (to the striking Arabs) since the daily expense of supporting 20,000 strikers is very heavy and the strike is now in its forty-third day."

Employing the most modern war tactics, Arab rioters late yesterday attacked and raided the Jewish settlement of Magdiel, in the Sharon Valley.

Secret Parley Debates Size Of D. C. Fund

Conferees See Hope for Compromise Before Adjournment.

Blanton Sends Reporters Away, Charging They Might Eavesdrop.

The size of the Federal lump sum payment to the District Government hung in the balance last night as Senate and House conferees took a brief recess following a closely guarded parley yesterday morning.

Neither Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, nor any of the House managers would discuss the conferences except to say that there appears to be some hope for a compromise before adjourning, thus obviating the necessity for a continuing resolution.

It was said that no more conferences will be held for two days at least, and it is presumed that Thomas in the meanwhile will sound out his colleagues on the counter-proposal of the House.

Blanton Is Present.

Senator Thomas was the only member of the Senate group who established a new precedent by meeting the House conferees on their own battleground—the office of the House Appropriations Committee.

House managers present were Representative Blanton, acting chairman, and Representatives Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri; Jacobsen (Democrat), of Iowa, and Johnson (Democrat), of West Virginia.

A few minutes after the parley started Blanton blustered out of the conference room and demanded that newspapermen, who were waiting in the reception room, leave the Appropriation Committee offices entirely.

He said they might eavesdrop on the executive session being held behind heavy doors.

Attacks Thomas' Sincerity.

Blanton paved the way for another battle with the Senate conferees by placing in the appendix of the Congressional Record on Saturday a long blast attacking the sincerity of purpose as well as the contentions of Senator Elmer Thomas.

His statement was in the form of a letter replying to Thomas' proposal for a compromise based on acceptance of the $5,700,000 lump sum payment in the pending bill and the setting up of a commission to determine the Federal fiscal relationship to the District for future years.

Blanton termed the latter proposal "ridiculous."

Thomas in his letter stated that the Senate conferees could see no reason for yielding on the lump sum recommended by the Budget Bureau and indorsed by the President.

The Texan in his letter also stated that the President has nothing to do with the government of he District, save the appointment of the Commissioners. The task, he added, lies exclusively in the hands of Congress.

Lost to Taxation.

Buildings value dat $1,200,000 have been torn down and lost to taxation, while revenues of the parking lot business have mounted nearly to $1,000,000 a year William A. Roberts, people's counsel, said in a speech broadcast last night from Station WOL.

The figures were cited by Roberts to substantiate his complaint that failure to construct Government parking garages in the downtown congested zone has been "failure No. 1" among the things which were not pushed to a conclusion at the session of Congress now drawing to a close.

Measures providing for study of the desirability of subways, a new loan shark law and another embodying the provisions of the uniform sales law also were mentioned by the people's counsel. The bill providing for a corporation which would constructand administer the proposed Government garages was introduced in the House by Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, and Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, ranking minority member of the Senate District Committee.

Brains, Brawn

Officers and Enlisted Men to Clash in Softball.

The "brains" will be represented by students of the War College, all o fthem Major and Colonel standing, and from whose ranks the country's future generals will be drawn; while the "brawn" will be supplied by enlisted men at Fort Washington. The two teams are to meet in a softball game on the college field.

Games between high ranking officers and privates are rare and the doughboys from Fort Washington are determined hot to let the occasion slip to show up their superiors. The officers, on the other hand, are relying on some fancy military strategies to carry them through the ninth inning.

The Kitten Brought a Bullet

Child Is Hurt As Police Fire In Taxi Chase

Carrying Milk to Her Kitten, Winifred Vogt Is Struck on Shoulder.

An 11-year-old girl, carrying milk for her kitten, narrowly missed death and serious injury yesterday morning when she walked into the line of fire from a police scout car which was chasing a speeding taxicab.

The child, Winifred Vogt, of 518 Sixth street northwest, was struck by a bullet or fragment of stone or asphalt chipped up by a bullet. She was treated at Casualty Hospital for an abrasion to her shoulder.

Policemen Irving Lubore and Marvin O. Myers, of the First Precinct, were chasing a speeding taxi which they believed stolen. The chase started at Seventh and H streets northwest. Speeding along Sixth street the hacker forced the scout car into a curb, damaging the latter auto.

The police car took up the chase again after having dimculty getting started. When it drew alongside the hacker, Lubore fired six shots at the car, one striking Winifred and another piercing her father's car, which had just been vacated in front of their home.

At the First Precinct the driver said he is Hunter Satterwaite, 25, of 1418 Perry place northwest. Police said he told them he did not want to be arrested because he had just finished serving an eight-months term for driving on a revoked permit, unauthorized use of a car and driving while drunk.

Winifred and her mather and father had just returned from Luray, Va., with a small girl friend at 4:30 a. m. She had acpuired a kitten on the trip and insisted on going to the store for milk.

McKellar Bars Vote on Repeal For Red Rider

Hopes of Passage Dim as House D. C. Day Omission Is Hinted.

Prospects for repeal of the "red rider" at this session lessened considerably yesterday as Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, blocked a Senate vote on the unanimous consent calendar.

While another attempt may be made to pass the Wheeler bill, either by unanimous consent or upon motion of Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, nothing can be done until the tax bill is disposed of, and then only if Congres does not adjourn Saturday.

Indications in the House were that the District will again be deprived of its legislative day next Monday despite vague promises of House leaders.

Although nothing definite has been announced, supporters of the Sisson bill feared that they will again be deprived of a chance to call up the bill by action of House Democratic leaders. Even should Congress remain in session beyond Saturday it was understood that it would take a recess over the Republican convention, unles sadjournment is certain by Tuesday.

Because the majority of Republicans is supporting the Sisson bill, its sponsors will not object to a unanimous consent request for the recess, it was said, for fear of arousing the ill will of the minority party.

Should Congress remain in session until Tuesday, it is certain that the District would be robbed of its legislative day again, as the final hours are always devoted to last-minute conference reports and unopposed legislation.

The outlook for a District day June 22, which would be the next opportunity for the Sisson bill in the regular course of events, is no brighter even if adjournment were to be delayed that long. The Democratic convention begins on June 23, and a recess beginning the day before would be certain.

Seantor McKellar indicated last night he may withdraw his objection after reading the report of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. He merely said he had heard rumors that Communism is being taught in Washington public schools.

Sisson yesterday stated that he will not amend his bill to meet the wishes of Speaker Byrns and Majority Leader Bankhead even though the measure goes over until the Seventy-fifth Congress.

"It's either outright repeal or nothing," he said. "Any half-way legislation would leave a suspicion of Communistic tendencies against the school teachers or the oBard of Education."

Byrns had suggested that a bill which barred simply the advocacy of Communism, repealing the ban on teaching the facts about Soviet Russia, might be given the right of way.

One-Man Car Purchase Hit By 3 Groups

Declare More Trolleys of This Design Will Slow Up Traffic.

Citizens Units Also Form Joint Transportation Committee.

Three citizens associations last night adopted resolutions opposing the proposal of the Capital Transit Co. to purchase a score of additional second-hand one-man street cars for use here.

The associations taking the action were those of Manor Park, Takoma Park, D. C. and Kenilworth.

The Manor Park association adopted the resolution at a picnic-meeting in Rock Creek Park. It was the association's belief that more one-man cars would tend to slow up and complicate traffic.

In another resolution, the association urged Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to aid in the organization of a Sixth Precinct Boys Club.

Joint Transportation Unit.

In addition to opposing the one-man cars, the Takoma group announced the formation of a mass transportation joint committee representing the association and the Chillum Heights, Sixteenth street Heights, Brightwood, and Manor Park associations.

The committee was instructed to fight for maintenance of the Third street car line and for all day service on the Fifth street express bus line.

A letter was ordered sent to the board of education asking for the location of a junior high school in the Walter Reed area to relieve congestion at Paul Junior High School.

Oppose PWA Project.

The Kenilworth association adopted a resolution voicing disapproval of the PWA project to erect a 340-unit colored dwelling group on Benning road east of Twenty-first street. The resolution urged that the development be for white tenants.

According to the resolution, the neighborhood of the project and all adjoining streets ar eoccupied by white persons.

The Forest Hills Association last night voted to request the District to buy a piece of land at Thirtieth and Davenport streets northwest so residents may develop a playground there at their own expense.

A resolution introduced by Mrs. Wilbur La Roe, jr., opposing the proposal of Representative Thomas L. Blanton that the Board of Education be placed under the District Commissioners, was adopted.

Bill to Safeguard Property Offered

A bill to protect District property owners against loss of their homes was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Lemke (Republican), of South Dakota, coauthor of the several measures to aid farm mortgagees.

The bill provides that no judgment, lien or mortgage shall be foreclosed on realty without a sale at public auction.

In the event of such a sale, the property would be redeemable within a year upon payment of 6 per cent interest, and the debtor would be entitled to remain in the house or to collect whatever rent accrued during that period.

Harper Loses Claim Against Bank Officers

By the Associated Press.

Robert N. Harper, former president of the District National Bank, which failed to reopen after the 1933 national banking holiday, yesterday lost in the Supreme Court his claim for $17,600 against 17 other former officers and directors of the bank.

Harper said the money was due under an oral agreement among the bank officers to maintain price of bank's stock by buying and selling operations on the Washington Stock Exchange between 1928 and 1933, through a "joint adventure" carried out by Christian J. Gockeler.

The court refused to interfere with a 3-to-2 opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in which the majority said the oral contract was "against public policy" and so could not be enforced.

Harper contended the oral agreement was "to conserve both public and private" interests in the bank and was a "lawful as well as moral right."

Because of enactment of the securities and exchange act of 1934 with its provisions against "rigging of markets, stock pools and such practices," Harper contended the high court should allow a review and determine whether certain stock "stabilization" methods were legal.

Youth Seriously Hurt In Motorcycle Crash

Leonard Davis, 19, of 1412 Chapin street northwest, suffered a fracture of the left thigh late yesterday when his motorcycle grazed a truck, then struck a tree at Thirty-first and M streets northwest.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital. Physicians said his condition was serious.

Police said the driver of the truck was Alphonso Edwards, Negro, of the 1800 block of Half street southwest. He was not held.

Raymond Wise Captains Unit in Victory Over Seven Others.

Company G of the St. John's College cadet regiment won first place in the twenty-first annual competitive drill held yesterday by the Vermont avenue institution in the North Ellipse, south of the White House grounds.

Captained by Raymond Wise, Company G finished ahead of the seven other companies which comprise the two battalions of the St. John's cadet regiment. Second prize went to Company B, led by Capt. William Quinn, and third honors were captured by Company A, Martin Avignone, captain.

Corpl. James E. Madden, representing Company A, won the indiyidual competitive drill. Corpl. Joseph Giebel, of Company B, was second.

Special commendation for outstanding all-around work was given Sidney Lawrence, platoon sergeant. Staff Sergt. George H. Cain was presented the Maj. William Kernan medal as the best noncommissioned officer in the regiment

A formal guard mount, never before attempted by the regiment, was presented by the non-commissioned officers. For this event, Staff Sergt. Cain was new officer of the day, Guide Sergt. Benjamin Fishburne was old officer of the day, Guide Sergt. Ward was adjutant and Sergt. John Waldron was sergeant major of the guard.

As commander of the prize-winning company, Capt. Wise received a gold medal and the Maj. Ernest W. Brown cup.

Congress Votes Memorial Here For Jefferson

Both Branches Approve a $3,000,000 Monument to Great Leader.

The Senate and House simultaneously passed a bill yesterday authorizing Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission to proceed with erection of a memorial to the author of the Declaration of Independence in Washington. An appropriation of $3,000,000 is provided.

The commission has not yet decided what type of a memorial it will construct, although the House Library Committee in its report stated:

"The stage of the work has so far proceeded, the commission is now ready to award contracts for the construction of the memorial. The lowest estimate was that of 3,000,000, for which sum authorization is requested."

At the last meeting the commission considered, but did not act upon, three proposals:

The joint resolution adopted yesterday authorizes the commission to designate any Federal agency to execute actual construction of a memorial and to call upon the Fine Arts Commission for assistance.

A final provision permits the commission to make expenditures for personal services without regard to the civil service laws.

Staunton, Va., June 1.—Lynn Forbes Barry, 4203 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was graduated yesterday at the seventy-sixth annual commencement exercises of Staunton Military Academy.

Barry attended Roosevelt High School in Washington and won the scholarship awarded through The Washington Post. He was awarded the academic decoration of the third class.

Ouster Hinted For Babcock By Federation

Pamphlet Cited Attacking Administration on Personnel.

Special Meeting Called to Consider Asking Resignation.

Intimation that E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Em-Employes, may be ousted summarily as a result of his recent attack on the New Deal's Civil Service policy was voiced by high federation officials yesterday.

Aroused by his action, which they claim has compromised the organization, national officers in Washington have called a special executive council meeting for Saturday, when he may be asked to resign or will be recalled.

An alternative may be offered by which the council may suspend Babcock until the next federation convention in Detroit in September, when the combined membership may vote on his action.

The trouble arose when the Republican National Committee issued a pamphlet under Babcock's name bitterly attacking the Administration's personnel policies.

Babcock insisted he wrote the pamphlet as a private citizen and as a former secretary of the Civil Service Commission.

Several units of the A. F. G. E., including the Civil Service, Agricultural Adjustment Administrationa and Internal Revenue lodges already have denounced their president's action.

Reunion Banquet Held by Alumnae

Gertrude McNally last night spoke on the loyalty of graduates in the chief address at the annual reunion banquet of the Alumnae Association of Holy Cross Academy at the Mayflower Hotel.

This year's graduating class of the academy, including four daughters of former students, was initiated into membership of the association as more than three score alumnae looked on.

Those initiated were Mary Aires, Doris Batson, Charlotte Cook, Elizabeth Cremen, Alize Phillipe, Patricia Mullaly, Rita Speiss, Dorethia Lansdale, Elizabeth Klein, Mary Wright, Mary Malony, Rosemary eDrmody, Agnes Drew, Marguerite McCaw, Mary Maloley McManus, Eleanor Louise Payne, Janes Louise Egan, Virginia McReynolds, Agnes Doherty, and Marcia Creecy.

Doris Batson played a Litz rhapsody and Rose Dermody sang "Sylia." Mrs. Eugenie Widmayer was the toastmaster and Mrs. Louise Hoover Egan, president of the academy, welcomed the group.

Sims Loses Appeal In Liquor Sentence

Sentenced to serve from one to three years in prison for possession of illegal liquor, Corliss Sims yesterday lost in Supreme Court his claim the indeterminte sentence imposed upon him was unconstitutional.

The law under which Sims was convicted provided for minimum and maximum sentences upon conviction, with parole and probatoinary powers between these limits. The parole powers, the law provided, rested with a special parole board.

New Films Are Accorded Brief Coast Prevues

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 1.—Picketing the preview parade:

"SONG OF CHINA." (Douglas MacLean release.) First all-Chinese picture is beautifully photographed and highly artistic, but it has no story to speak of, and must depend on novelty with audiences.

Produced, directed, acted and photographed by Chinese in China, the film is silent save for a surprisingly effective musical accompaniment by the Wei Chung-Lo Orchestra, and Long Yu Hisu, a vocalist. Subtitles are both in Chinese and English.

The story is a simple history of a family's comparative filial piety through three generations, toped off with a happy ending. Preview audience got its biggest cheer spotting likenesses of Chinese players to Hollywood luminaries: Clark Gable, Merle Oberon, Adophe Menjou, and so forth.

Print shown was none too good, having a flickering quality unfamiliar in the United States for several years. On the basis of this one, the Chinese product seems unlikely to rival Hollywood.

"NOBODY'S FOOL," (Nniversal). A tailored to measure comedy which should wow Edward Everett Horton fans. Script doesn't miss a single bit of business suitable to the standard Horton style.

Funnyman Horton is cast as a small town waiter with a booster complex and a passion for real estate. He moves to New York and falls into one of those chains of circumstances.

Results are that a gangster chief and his mob are forced to good deeds, a memorial hospital is built on the site of a gambling hall, an old lady is given a fortune, and Horton indulges in frivolous romance with Glenda Farrell.

"HEARTS IN BONDAGE," (Republic). You'll never guess what this one's about. Give up? Well, heh, heh, it's the story of the Monitor and the Merrimac, battling in Hampton Roads, Va., during the War Between the States.

Lew Ayres, never a great actor in spite of "The (Greta Garbo) Kiss," and "All Quiet on the Western Front," gives promise of becoming a much better director, putting the picture over in grand style.

It's a blood and thunderish action picture, with war and love all in a breath, but is handled with a restraint that does Ayres credit. Ironclads themselves have an air of authenticity.

James Dunn plays a young naval officer commanding the Monitor, and Mae Clark fills in as heart interest. Picture also has Fritz Leiber, Henry B. Walthall and others.

"PALM SPRINGS" (Paramount). Producer Walter Wanger, just before transferring allegiance to United Artists, turns out a love story which hasn't too much on the ball, but passes a pleasant hour.

High spot is a gorgeous cowboy ballad, "In the Hills of Old Wyoming," by Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger, which is likely to set the Nation humming.

About The Showshops

AFTER many false starts and following negotiations extending over period of two years, Guthrie McClintic has arranged to present John Gielgud, one of England's foremost actors, in William Shakespeare's "Hamlet" in New York early in the fall. This will be his first appearance in America.

BELL.

Despite his youth—he was born on April 14, 1904—Mr. Gielgud has acted innumerable modern and classic roles in England. He made his stage debut as the Herald in "Henry V" in the "Old Vic" in London. His "Hamlet" holds the record for the second longest run in London; his "Romeo and Juliet" for the longest.

John Gielgud is the great-nephew of Ellen Terry, the grandson of Kate Terry and the nephew of Mabel Terry Lewis—truly a royal theatrical lineage.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Payette today are receiving the congratulations of their friends upon the arival of Robert Crandall Payette, a 9-pound son, born yesterday morning, June 1, at 6 o'clock, in Garfield Memorial Hospital. Mr. Payette, general zone manager for the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, already is calling his son "Bob." Both Bob—they've even got me doing it!—and his mother, the former Dorothy Dolores ("Dixie") Crandall, are thriving. Master Robert will not be lonely in the family manse at 5910 Sixteenth street, where Dolores, 7, and John, jr., 5, are eagerly awaiting his arrival in the nursery. We hereby add our heartiest congratulations to the avalanche under which the proud parents already are buried.

Dots and Dashes.

Guthrie McClintic, having signed Mr. Gielgud, returned from England last Thursday to accompany his wife, Katharine Cornell, on her transcontinental tour in George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," which opened in Boston last week and reached Philadelphia last night for a week's stay . . . Nearest approach to Washington of any booking on the tour . . . Which is not near enough . . . Eduardo Ciannelli, with Miss Cornell in the Shaw play, will act his original role of Trock in Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset" on the screen . . . It was played here by Myron McCormick . . . A recent West Coast dispatch printed on this page, to the effect that Billie Burke, his widow, was able to unearth only three of Florenz Ziegfeld's full signatures, has resulted in communications from three Washingtonians who have them . . . One, a feminine telephoness, who left a number but not a name; one, an attache of the National, who has Ziegfeld's signature among many others for which he has been offered a compartively pretty penny, and the last, Louis C. Cosdon, attorney in the Rust Building, who secured the Ziegfeld signature on a Childs' menu on Thanksgiving night in 1918, after a performance of "Whoopee," at the National . . . He neglected, however, to get Eddie Cantor's, George Olsen's and Ethel Shutta's . . . They were wheatcaking, too . . . So it seems, after all, that Flo let his signatures flow practically all over the place . . . Tonight is the night the Washington Players go to town in "Stop Thief" . . . In Roosevelt Auditorium, at 8:30 . . . Swell local cast . . . Even if Hollywood does want Jessie Matthews, they can't get her now . . . Star of "It's Love Again," current at the Earle, is under a nine-picture contract with Gaumont British—"Evergreen" and "First a Girl" were the first two . . . Leaving six to go . . . Looks as if she'd make a first down . . . Without interference!

More of the Same.

All Loew's chillun got wings . . . Division Manager Carter Barron's are in the form of a new LaSalle petrol wagon . . . Gene Ford, manager of the Fox, made the Missus a birthday present of a swishy convertible cabriolaundaulette, or something, with deep maroon body and tan top that neither of them dares put down for fear he can't get it up again . . . And Ray Bell—no relation—is saving taxi fare between the theater and the Fox Film Exchange projection room in a new de luxe sedan . . . Me, I'm still bowing tendons trying to raise street car windows! . . . The Pat O'Malley with Jack Hylton's orchestra, coming to the Earle stage Friday, is not the Pat O'Malley of the Hollywood filmob . . . This one is a tenor . . . Grace Moore opens on the Metropolitan screen tomorrow in a renewal of her downtown run in "The King Steps Out" . . . the king being Franchot Tone, who looks startlingly like Harpo Marx in that curly, blond fright-wig he wears as a Hapsburg . . . That last Variety Club luncheon of the season, at the Willard, is next Monday, instead of yesterday . . . Carter Barron and Hardie Meakin, kings for the day . . . And they have yet to turn out to be deuces . . . Final rehearsals tonight, tomorrow and Thursday for the Players Club of Central Community Center's last play of the season . . . "The Haunted House," by Owen Davis, at Wilson Auditorium, Friday night at 8:30 . . . A new high for Memorial Day attendance was set at Glen Echo Park over the holiday week-end . . . Waiting lines at every attraction, crowds in the Spanish Garden Ballroom and a lot of the "we can take it" boys and girls in the Crystal Pool, even if the water wasn't so hot . . . Meaning hot, not "hot" . . . Don't forget the reading of Irwin Shaw's "Bury the Dead" in Pierce Hall tomorrow night by members of the New York acting company of the New Theater, including Robert Shayne, Lee Cobb and Hester Sondergaard . . . Robert Shayne—to which a final Dawe should be appended—was a resident of Washington from 1907 to 1918, the year of his graduation from Central High . . . He was back in 1933, with Walter Huston in "Keep 'em Rolling," filmed at Fort Myer under the working title of "Rodney" . . . Became a professional actor in Birmingham, Ala., in 1927 . . . So now you know . . . The much-discussed "Fury" yesterday was booked to follow "Under Two Flags," at the Palace, instead of Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald in "San Francisco" . . . Sylvia Sidney and Spencer Tracy featured.

• • • •

Shrinking-Violet Note.

With this booking perhaps a fortnight away, Louis B. Mayer, production chief of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, likes to think that that was what Shakespeare had in mind when he penned the line, "I do oppose my patience to his 'Fury.'" The conceited so-and-so!

Theaters Plan Midnight Show For Boys' Club

Fox and Earle Contribute to Program at Howard Tomorrow Night.

With more than 4,000 associate memberships now registered in No. 2 Precinct in the Boys Club of Metropolitan Police campaign for funds, enthusiasm runs high in this section. The next club is to be established there.

Manager Shep Allen, of the Howard Theater, has arranged for a special midnight show, a full three hours of variety entertainment, starting at 12 midnight, tomorrow, June 3. All proceeds will go to the treasury of the Boys Club of the the treausy of the Boys' Club of the Blanche Calloway, star of the stage, and her orchestra, the Police Boys Club Hillbilly Band and two complete boxing contests on the stage will precede the screen attraction, "I Married a Doctor," featuring Pat O'Brien and Josephine Hutchinson.

Two additional features include numbers contributed by Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Fox, and Harry E. Lohmeyer, assistant manager of Warner Brothers theaters.

Orchestra seats are reserved at 75 cents and admission to balcony is 40 cents.

Yesterday added $2,445 to the Police Boys Club Campaign Fund, including 1,022 associate members at one dollar each for 1936, taken by 10 of the 12 precincts and 4 bureaus, bringing the total for the drive to $51,896.

The 1936 budget for the Boys Club includes the establishment of a summer camp, an additional club in No. 2 Precinct, and the expansion of facilities in the overcrowded clubs in Nos. 4, 5 and 11.

Contract Awarded For Pumping Units

Contract for new pumping units and electrical equipment for the McMillan Park pumping station of the District water supply system was awarded yesterday by the War Department to the Industrial Piping and Engineering Co., of Baltimore, for $141,900.

Awarding of the contract was in pursuance of plans, approved some time ago, to revamp the old station. It now is a steam plant. It is to be electrically operated when the old machinery and equipment has been replaced.

Replacement of the various units is to be done step by step so that existing facilities may, so far as possible, be held ready for emergencies, it was said.

Work of changing the station equipment is not expected to be completed for 18 months, officials said.

The first day that Luise was without her license, she couldn't find anyone to drive her car and had to walk to the grocery store . . . She tripped, fell down, hurt herself, and has been out of "The Good Earth" for a week, delaying production.

Screen Beauty Wades Into Career!

When Joe E. Brown comes along to the local screens in "Earthworm Tractor," a film adaptation of the satevepost stories, Carol Hughes will be prominent in the supporting cast. This is Miss Hughes plunging into the Pacific at Santa Monica during a lull in the shooting schedules at Warner Brothers' Burbank Studios. From the design of her beach cushion, Miss Hughes evidently believes that "a pretty swirl is like a melody!"

Lupescu Defies Peasant Army Seeking Ouster

Intimate of the Rumanian King Cool Before Menace of 500,000.

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, Rumania, June 1.—A red-headed woman tonight defied an army of 500,000 peasants demanding her banishment.

Mme. Magda Lupescu remained cool in the face of the huge peasant demonstration against her influence with King Carol and the Rumanian throne.

The belief persisted, however, that eventually she would make another trip out of the country to allow agrarian resentment to cool. She has done that before.

But meanwhile, it was believed that intimates who advised her to leave at once met her flat refusal. She is said to have refused to be intimidated by Ion Mihalache's powerful but peaceful army, or to admit that her presence is the cause of growing unrest.

Should she flee the country it is believed she may choose southern France as her destination while traveling incognito.

Her opponents said there were signs she would make another of her periodic pilgrimmages for political purposes.

Bucharest itself was calm following the entry of the huge protest army yesterday, although all circles were buzzing anew with gossip about the situation.

The sturdy farmers, wearing the national costume with a white cross on the sleeve, prevented any violence as Mihalche pledged his loyalty to King Carol, but declared:

"The roads between the King and the peasants shall no longer be barricaded by the court camarilla (clique)."

Nicaragua

heart attack today, apparently induced by excitement.

The rebellious national guardsmen were reported to be in control of the city of Leon.

Fierce Fighting.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, June 1 (AP). Fierce fighting at Leon in revolt-torn Nicaragua went on over the week-end, said reports reaching here today.

Informed sources said the following situation caused the revolt:

President Sacasa, with various Liberal and Conservative leaders, approved on Friday the nomination of Leonardo Arguello, former foreign minister and Liberal Party member, as a coalition candidate for the presidency against the wishes of Gen. Anastasio Somoza, director of the national guard.

Gen. Somoza, considering this a final break between himself and the president, removed Sacasista civil authorities throughout the republic, appointing Somozista in their stead.

Somoza then gave the military command of Managua to his friend and supporter, the former President, Gen. Jose Maria Moncada. Then Somoza, taking 600 troops, went to Leon, where 500 loyal Sacasista, under control of Col. Ramon Sacasa, were holding the Acosasco fortress, key to Leon.

At 4 p. m. Saturday Somoza issued an ultimatum demanding that the fortress be surrendered. His demand was refused, and at 6 p. m. Somoza attacked the stronghold, which was reported still to be resisting Sunday night after fierce fighting in which there were numerous casualties.

Enoc Aguado, former Vice President of Nicaragua and a loyal Sacasista, arrived here Saturday and left today for El Salvador. A special envoy of the Persident, he is explaining Sacasa's plight to neighboring governments in an attempt to get aid.

In addition to all the National Guard, which is the only official military organization in Nicaragua, Gen. Somoza also controls several thousand so-called Blue Shirts, a strong organization of laborers and peasants. Most of them are believed to be armed.

$50,000 Asked Of Barrymore In Ex-Aid's Suit

Actor Charged With Slander as Former Secretary Names Miss Barrie.

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 1.—John Barrymore's former confidential secretary, filed a $50,000 slander suit against the actor today, charging he falsely and maliciously accused him of embezzling $30,000 worth of bonds.

Simultaneously, the secretary, Emmett D. Camomile, declared in another court document that once, at his employer's request, he removed him from the "custody" of Elaine Barrie, who was pursuing him across the continent westward from New York.

Acting on Barrymore's complaint that his protege was harassing and embarrassing him with her persistent attentions, he flew from Los Angeles to Chicago and whisked him away from her, Camamile said.

The assertions were made in an answer filed in Superior Court to Barrymore's suit to recover certain records and papers he charges his secretary retained after his discharge last January 7.

Barrymore has been seen frequently in the film colony with Miss Barrie, who has said she and the actor are in love.

Camomile, in his answer, said he cared for Barymore for long periods while the actor was under the influence of liquor and unable to carry on with his motion picture work.

Under his care, he said, Barrymore recovered sufficiently to obtain radio and film contracts at $5,000 or more a week.

Camomile quoted Barrymore as telling him:

"My dear Camomile, you are to me like the net is to the trapeze performer—when I fall, you are there to catch me."

Barrymore fired him, he said, on the advice of Miss Barrie and others who accompanied her from New York to Hollywood.

The former secretary in his answer said he had retained certain documents which were in his custody as private secretary, but did so for the benefit of Barrymore.

Concerning his ministrations to Barrymore, Camomile said he spent "great amounts of time and at most unusual hours with the plaintiff in an effort to restore and rehabilitate the plaintiff's physical and general condition to the end that he might again become employed in some gainful and useful occupation."

Springfield, N. J., June 1.—Bob Barnett, red-haired professional at the Chevy Chase Club, Washington, D. C., shared the spotlight with Walter Scheiber, New York professional, as the Nation's finest golfers arrived today and tuned up at Baltusrol for the National Open championship which opens Thursday.

Barnett, World War veteran, fired a blistering 68, four under par, for the lowest practice round of the day, while Scheiber, first alternate in the Metropolitan section, who doesn't know whether he will play in the championship, had a 69.

Three other Washington professionals, Wiffy Cox, of Kenwood; Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, and Leo Walper, of Bethesda, also were on the scene today, but none reported scores in the class with Barnett. Cox scored a 77. Benny Loring, Charlottesville pro, did a 73.

Parks Has Eagle, Birdie.

Sam Parks, the defending champion, who went around with young Fred Haas, the New Orleans amateur, had a 75, finishing with an eagle and a birdie on the last two holes.

Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., 1934 Metropolitan Open champion and one of the favorites to win, and Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., shot 71's, cracking par by a stroke, while Byron Nelson, the present Metropolitan champion from Ridgewood, N. J.; Harold McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., New Bay State Open champion; Harry Cooper, Chicago, and Chick Chinn, the Japanese star, reported 72's.

The veteran MacDonald Smith, playing with steel-shafted clubs for the first time since he started competing in the National Open, had a 73, and so did Frank Walsh, Chicago.

Billy Burke, the 1931 National Open champion from Cleveland, and John Revolta, Chicago, reported 74's but though most of the other stars went around the course at least once most of them did not keep score.

Dutra Liked By Many.

Gene Sarazen, the 1932 champion, tried it for a few holes, but gave up, and Olin Dutra, carrying the only gallery of the day, played two or three balls on every hole. Early sentiment is shifting Dutra into the favorite class. He is playing with greater confidence than at any time since he won at the Merion Cricket Club in 1934.

Denny Shute, Boston, and Horton Smith, Chicago, also failed to report scores.

Designed to conform with the old English idea of how a golf course should be built, Baltusrol sends its first six holes straight away from the clubhouse, and in the opinion of the experts these six holes hold the secret of the course. They usually play dead into the wind as they did today, and almost all the stars fell into trouble before they reached the turn.

Browns Here Today; Face DeShong

Nats Entertain Winners of 3 Straight; Harris Orders Bat Drill.

From out of the West, where they were eminently successful during the past few days, come the St. Louis Browns to do battle with the Nats today in the first of a three-game series.

Possessors now of three straight victories are the eighth-place Browns; all of 'em scored at the expense of the Champion Detroit Tigers over the week-end. Thus has Manager Rogers Hornsby's crew finally begun to justify the belief that no longer are they a set-up.

Here, the Browns will be seeking their first 1936 victory over the Washingon club. Four times the two teams have clashed this season and four times the Nats have triumphed.

DeShong vs. Thomas.

Manager Bucky Harris will send his new top-ranking pitcher, Jimmy DeShong, against the Browns in the series opener. With five victories and two defeats, DeShong has proved the most consistent of the Nats' hurlers. His last effort was a five-hit shutout against the Athletics.

Al Thomas, a former Nat who lost a one-run decision to the Washington club in St. Louis, is expected to go to the mound for the Browns today.

Mildly alarmed by the recent weak hitting of the Nats, Manager Harris summoned his players for batting practice yesterday and sent them through a two-hour batting drill against the best pitching he could muster.

Despite Owner Clark Griffith's announcement that Roberto Estalella was released to the Albany club only on the condition that he be played in the outfield, the little Cuban appeared at third base in both games of the double-header at Baltimore Sunday.

Griffith explained that he consented to this arrangement only because the Albany third baseman was ill, but that Estalella would be removed to the outfield next week. He made a hit in each of the games Sunday, including a home run that traveled over the centerfield fence, 420 feet distant.

Orangeman, U.S. Horse, Wins Purse in England

Hurst Park, England June 1 (AP).—William Woodward's American-bred 3-year-old, Orangemna, today won the Penrhyn Cupt at a mile, defeating R. Middlemas' Fairplay by a head. Lord Rosebery's Calder was third in the field of 12.

Orangeman, a bay son of Sir Gallahad III—Moira Rhu, paid 11 to 2 in the betting. The race carried a purse of £1,250 (about $6,250).

Bill Hallahan, Veteran, Bought by Cincinnati

Perry 'Quits,' Defeated by Von Cramm

World's Top Net Ace Drops Last Set by Love Margin.

German Women Also Win in Hard Court Play at Paris.

Paris, June 1 (AP).—Firing a devastating attack that observing critics pronounced as almost perfect, Baron Gottfried Von Cramm gave Germany a clean sweep of singles titles in the French hard court tennis championships today by toppling England's great Fred Perry, 6-0, 2-6, 2-6, 6-0.

The victory, first for the German baron in four attempts against the recognized number one star in the tennis world, gave Germany its red letter day of all tennis. Before Baron Von Cramm tore the court, Mme. Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, German-born star now living in Denmark, won the women's title for the Fatherland by defeating Mme. Rene Mathieu of France in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4.

Stops Trying.

Von Cramm outgamed and outfought Perry so convincingly at the finish that the English champion surrendered toward the end of the battle. After squaring the match twice, Perry fell behind 4-0 in the final set and gave up. As Von Cramm clicked over the final, winning points, the Englishman merely stood at the baseline as the bullet-like returns of the Teuton winged over the net.

Perry opened the match with his favorite stalling and loafing tactics but before he could get warmed up Von Cramm had raced away to a 4-0 game lead. Figuring it was too late to waste motion on that set, Perry quit trying, the German winning the opener at love. During the set, Von Cramm broke Perry's service three times without a struggle.

Von Cramm dashed away to a 2-1 lead in the second set but Perry suddenly found the range and ran out with a string of five straight games.

Takes Early Lead.

Playing strongly and spiritedly, Perry raced ahead to a 2-1 lead in the third set, but Von Cramm recovered rapidly, won his own service and duplicated Perry's second set feat by winning five in a row, attacking Perry's backhand and winning the final game of the set with two terrific aces.

The fourth set was almost a duplication of the second, Perry losing his opening service and then rallying to win four in a row and, finally, the set with savage cross-court drives the German couldn't handle.

It was all Von Cramm in the fifth and deciding set. He started by breaking Perry's service, added his own and then streaked away to a 4-0 lead, winning the fourth with four blinding service aces. Perry quit after that, losing at love.

Mme. Mathieu, beaten 6—2, 6—1, by the German girl in last year's final, put up a harder struggle today, but was simply outclassed. The tall German played a machine-like, waiting game and outsteadied her rival. In winning the French title two years in succession, Mme. Sperling captured every one of her matches in straight sets.

Berlin, June 1 (AP).—As a result of his brilliant victory over Fred Perry in the finals of the French hard court tennis championships today, Baron Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany, will be sent to the United States to play in the American championships this fall. Sports leader von Tschammer-Osten telegraphed him an invitation to "represense Germany's colors in the United States."

Parks and Kunes Play In Canadian Tourney

Toronto, June 1 (AP).—Sam Parks, jr., of Pittsburgh, who is to defend his United States Open Golf championship this week, and young Gene Kunes, of Norristown, Pa., Canadian Open champion, will compete in the General Brock Open Golf tournament at the Lookout Point course, Fonthill, Ont., next week, it was announced today.

In addition to Parks and Kunes, others who will move on from Baltusrol to the Canadian course for the $4,100, 72-hole international test, include Tony Manero, the winner last year; Ed Dudley, Ray Mangrum, Horton Smith, Joe Kirkwood and Walter Hagen.

The tournament starts June 10.

Marty Gallagher Plans Three Fights Here During Summer

Marty Gallagher, the fistic pride of Foggy Bottom who has been very reluctant to fight during the past year or so yesterday announced that his 15-round encounter with Bob Tow at Griffith Stadium next Monday night would be the forerunner of a period of great activity for him.

"I shall fight at least three times this summer," Marty admitted. "Of course, I should like to take on some good names, but I shall not bar anyone. An ideal set-up, so far as I am concerned, would be to fight Jack Sharkey, Primo Carnera and then that boy everyone seems to think is pretty good—Al Delaney."

"I was accused of not wanting to fight, of being too interested in my riding academy and practically everything else last summer and during the past winter when I was inactive in the ring," Gallagher continued. "The truth of the matter was that I was not fit to fight."

"The Boxing Commission hesitated to pass me for the Levinsky fight, because I had a bad appendix," the local heavyweight explained. "Finally the doctors decided I was fit to fight the Kingfish, but the whole matter scared me quite a bit, so, on the advice of my doctors, I laid off until now. Now I am well and have had an operation I needed very badly—so I am ready to fight anyone, any time, if the price is reasonable."

Gallagher was offered a bout with Joe Louis last winter in Chicago, but declined. Because of the money to be made fighting the Brown Bomber, practically every pug in the ring is striving for a bout with him and many could not understand why Gallagher refused the bout.

The scheduled all-colored boxing card which was to have been held at Griffith Stadium next Friday night yesterday was "indefinitely postponed." The official explanation given for the "postponement" was that LeRoy Haynes, the colored heavyweight who was to have made passes at one Tom Williams had injured his hand.

No permit ever was issued for the card, although the Boxing Commission had agreed to sanction it when—and if—the required bond was posted. In the course of agreeing to the bout, the Commission warned those concerned that unless Williams really made a fight of it all money would be held up and all concerned thoroughly investigated.

The bond was not posted—and the card was "indefinitely postponed."

Medal in D. C. Golf to Mrs. Meckley

By Dave Herman.

Determined to win back the title that was hers in 1930 and 1931, Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring Club, negotiated Congressional Country Club's long and testing course in 84 strokes yesterday to win the medal and outshoot a record field of 90 golfers in the District Women's championship.

Six over women's par for the 18-hole qualifying round, Mrs. Meckley topped Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of the host club, by two shots, after a day of disappointing scoring—but not from Mrs. Meckley's standpoint.

Settles Down.

After rounding the turn in 44, and starting back with a six, Mrs. Meckley played the next eight holes in only three over men's par, settling down with remarkable calm and ease while a flock of favorites were wilting under the medal strain.

Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional, who played with Mrs. Meckley, and who in pre-tournament calculations looked like a sure thing to capture the qualifying prize, scored a 90, but that was good enough to land a place in the championship flight of 16.

Standing even at 44 at the end of nine holes, Miss Dettweiler took a 7 on the tenth finished with a 6, and managed to collect but three pars on the back nine to come home with a staggering 46.

Dettweiler Ill.

Miss Dettweiler complained of feeling ill at the sixth, and had ice packs applied to her head in the clubhouse. She swung listlessly at the ball all along the back nine. She said she would be well enough to play today.

It was so tough to score that only four broke 90. Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, made a remarkable finish. After going out in 48, she played like a champion on the incoming nine for a 39, despite a 6 at the tenth and a 6 at the long thirteenth.

Mrs. Walper's 87 was two shots better than Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, of Congressional, who played the last nine in 41. Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, also of Congressional, qualified nicely with a 92, after an outging 52 appeared to have blasted her chances. But she retained her composure and fired a 40 on the stretch.

Scores of 94 qualified. Mrs. Wilda Martin, of Kenwood, and Mrs. W. S. Martin, of Washington Golf and Country Club, who weren't figured among the favorites, got in at these figures.

Mrs. Jack Scott, of Kenwood, for-

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Before Mister Ray Alvis took to managing the goofy shows known as Walkathons, he was something of a big-shot prize-fight manager. In fact, before Mister Alvis started matching the endurance of his Walkathon stooges with the ravages of insomnia, he managed three world's champions. He also managed Chuck Wiggins, but his man Wiggins never won a championship for various reasons.

POVICH.

Most of Wiggins' fights were, in fact, unofficial. He never quibbled about weight, referees or purse money. In fact, any street corner would do as a setting if Mister Wiggins felt in the mood for fighting, and Mister Wiggins would rather fight than eat. But Mister Alvis does not go so far as to say that Mister Wiggins would rather fight than drink.

Any handy tavern with ale on draft was Mister Wiggins' pet training camp. Other fighters might seek the mountains, or the beaches and elaborate camps, but Mister Wiggins was just plain folks. As long as the ale flowed, Mister Wiggins would battle it. He was just a free-drinking, free-swinging overgrown middleweight who picked his opponents where he found 'em and was not too particular.

So, it is fairly obvious that Mister Wiggins did not always have the law on his side in his fistic engagements. In fact, Mister Wiggins seemingly preferred to have the law on the other side. Coppers were his weakness and he didn't draw the line at coppers with clubs. If he was outnumbered, why that apparently was all right, too.

Anyway, it seems that Mister Wiggins and Mister Alvis were in dire need of $5,000 one week in 1925, or it might have been 1926, on account of a brush with the law which ended disastrously for Mister Wiggins. The five grand would tide Mister Wiggins over his embarrassment very nicely and Mister Alvis started looking around for $5,000 in the form of a fight guarantee.

Down in New Orleans the fight game was thriving at the time and Tommy Gibbons was something of a local idol. Mister Alvis persuaded the promoter that a Gibbons-Wiggins fight would gross him $25,000 and showed his willingness to co-operate by asking only a $5,000 guarantee. The match was made and Mister Alvis gleefully wired Mister Wiggins to report for training.

Mister Wiggins reported at New Orleans—with two broken ribs. There had been another little difference with some coppers en route, it seems, and Mister Wiggins had been outnumbered. Anyway, Mister Alvis was very much disgusted inasmuch as Mister Wiggins still rated as a pretty good piece of fistic machinery and a win over Gibbons might land him a title fight.

Mister Alvis, who needs no compass to figure the angles, perceived only one out, so he went to Gibbons' camp, confessed that Wiggins was in no shape to fight with his two broken ribs, and pleaded with the Gibbons people to lay off Chuck's right side. Hit him in the belly, on the chin, anywhere, in fact, Mister Alvis told 'em, but lay off those ribs, will yuh?

And like the good scouts they were, the Gibbons people promised, "Sure, Ray," they said. "Thassall right, leave it to us." With this pledge Mister Alvis felt relieved. He had known the Gibbons people for a long time.

A half-hour before the fight, as Mister Alvis taped his hands, Mister Wiggins expressed the hope that Mister Alvis would not be sore with him. "Sore with you, for what?" Mister Alvis inquired.

"Well, I just bet our five grand with a New Orleans bookie that I'd go ten rounds with Gibbons," confessed Mr. Wiggins.

When Mister Alvis recovered from his swoqn Mister Wiggins was en route to the ring, where Gibbons had already been announced.

Through five rounds Gibbons pounded at those ribs, and what held Wiggins up was a mystery to everybody in the know. With his $5,000 vanishing, Wiggins began to plead with Gibbons, who continued to answer with that left hook.

"Okay, then, Tommy," he finally whispered in a seventh-round clinch, "slam me there, but for Pete's sake lay off my chin. I fractured it in a car smash-up last week."

Whereupon Gibbons promptly shifted his attack to Mister Wiggins' chin and Mister Wiggins led with his lug during those last three rounds, just to make it more inviting. Nobody ever knocked Mister Wiggins out by hitting him on the chin, but Gibbons didn't know dat, and he didn't know either that Mister Wiggins' chin was not fractured at all.

And that is how come the bout went into the eleventh round and Mister Alvis tossed in the towel and Mister Wiggins saved his five grand and the double-crossers were triple-crossed.

Dickey Out of Hospital Tomorrow, Must Rest

Mrs. Chandler Wins Medal In South

Turns in 79 in Dixie Women's Tourney in Oklahoma.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 1.—Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, Tex., with a sub-par 79, appeared virtually certain today of medalist honors in the Southern Women's Golf tournament.

Mrs. Chandler's score, one under par, bettered by four strokes that of her nearest rival, Miss Betty Jameson, of Austic, Tex., who carded 42-41—83.

The 18-hole qualifying round was played in a 35-mile-an-hour wind which sent tee shots and approaches shooting off at crazy angles. Even on the smooth, tricky greens the wind disturbed players so that short putts became hazardous.

Conditions considered, Mrs. Chandler's performance was little short of remarkable. She was out in even par 39, and came in with 40, one under par. On the par five eighteenth hole, her second shot was 30 yards short of the green. She put her approach 3 feet from the cup then canned her putt for a birdie.

Mrs. Chandler was a quarter-finanist in the Women's National last year, and in her own words is "champion runnerup" in the Texas women's tournaments. She was runnerup four times and won the title in 1932.

U. S. L. T. A. Sends 5 to Wimbledon

Philadelphia, Pa., June 1 (AP).—The United States Lawn Tennis Association, through its secretary, Eddie Moss, announced tonight that it would send Wilmer Allison, Donald Budge, Gene Mako and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant to England for the allg-England championships at Wimbledon.

The squad will sail on the George Washington of the United States Lines at noon Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 1.—The Germantown Cricket Club's turf courts, the setting for the United Staes' loss of the Davis Cup nine years ago to France, again today was the burial ground for Uncle Sam's hopes in the 1936 international tennis competition.

For the first time since the cup play was split into zone warfare, the United States lost a series on her own soil as a couple of phlegmatic and determined Australians, Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist, completed a 3-to-2 victory over Wilmer Allison, Don Budge and Gene Mako in the final round of the American zone.

The gray-haired Crawford, the man who experts doubted could go five sets and still retain his rhythmic form, clinched the series and a berth for Australia in the inter-zone final at Wimbledon, England, in July with a business-like five-set victory over the luckless Allison, the American champion.

Crawford, who was baffling, particularly to American Cup leaders, by virtue of his ability to grow stronger with competition, set down Allison at 4—6, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2, 6—2 to give the Anzacs their third and decisive triumph. On the opening day, Saturday, Quist took the measure of Allison in four sets, while Crawford made a grand comeback but lost to Budge. In the doubles yesterday, Crawford and Quist spotted Budge and Mako a two-set, 4—1 lead and then beat the Californians out.

With the series in the bag, the fourth and final singles encounter between Budge and Quist amounted to an exhibition. Budge, who was all business in order to keep his singles record in the series clean, smothered the bronzed and athletic Quist in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2, 6—4.

Australians Leave Friday.

Although badly disappointed over the result of the series, Walter Merrill Hall, president of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association, announced immediately afterwards that the three American cupsters in addition to Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, who was left out of the competition in place of Allison, will sail Wednesday on the liner Manhattan for England.

In pursuit of the trophy they have not held since 1920, when they lost it to "Big Bill" Tilden and "Little Bill" Johnston, representing the United States, at Auckland, New Zealand, Crawford, Quist and Vivian McGrath, who like Grant, did not play in the series, will depart for England Friday on the Laconia. They also will play in the English championships at Wimbledon preparatory to meeting the winner of the European zone, with Germany or France their prospective opponent.

It was up to Allison, when he took the court against Crawford, if Uncle Sam was to stay in the running, and the 31-year-old Texan knew it. He showed none of the nervousness or fright he displayed Saturday in his contest with Quist and judging by the way he handled himself in the first set it appeared as though the issue might have come to the final match.

With his service sparkling and executing dazzling cross-court volleys at the net, the slim American closely approached his peak form of last year when he vanquished the renowned Fred Perry en route to the national title. On the other hand, Crawford looked no better than he did at the start of his other assignments in this series.

In view of the fact he had been put to ten testing sets in the first two days, Crawford was figured to be a tired man. He looked it in that first set and he seemed to be running out of endurance in the third set.

Rowe Has Ailing Teeth; Sullivan Kept by Tigers

Detroit, June 1 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers entrained for Philadelphia today to open their second Eastern invasion without Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe.

In the party was Joe Sullivan, the left-hander whom Manager Mike Cochrane read off the roster last night after his wobbly relief pitching had figured in the 11-10 defeat that enabled St. Louis to sweep a three-game series.

Rowe remained in Detroit to have repaire made on six abcessed teeth that he blamed for soreness in his flinging arm.

Prince Turley, Left at Post, Wins Charles Town Sprint, Pays $3

Two Favorites Net $16.80 Double

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 1.—Prince Turley, a son of Pince of Wales and Colinport and bred on the other side of the Blue Ridge Mountains at the old E. B. McLean farm, gave a speed lesson to six sprinters of assorted sexes here this afternoon and matched the track record of 1 minute for 5 furlongs. Virtually left at the post, while his backers moaned, Prince Turley almost ran over horses to get to the front before the field had settled into stride and then drew far out to score an easy victory.

Lady Dunlin, thanks to the ground she saved entering the stretch, was second, a length and a half ahead of Nay Nay, but four lengths behind the winner. Had Prince Turley and Jockey Charlie Quattlebaum been a trifle more alert at the gate, a new track record would have been written into the books.

The second day of the meeting saw the crowd return to normalcy. Some 3,500 were on hand for the sport and Prince Turley was not a secret. His odds declined and as the field reached the barrier the 1-to-2 sign was on display. Prinec Turley paid off at exactly that figure, or a $3 mutuel.

The biggest laugh of the day came after the sixth race, even those who bet Red Label at 6 to 5 had to smile. Jockey W. Hilley was tossed off the horse soon after the break and Red Label trailed the field. He made an extra trip around the track and then pulled himself up, turned and ran to the judges' stand, where his owner was waiting. Titian Kiddie made a runaway of the race at a $7.80 mutuel.

Fashion Queen, 3-year-old daughter of Canter, held sway from start to finish in the first race, over the Charles Town course. Jockey L. Pikor had to ride for dear life in the stretch, however, to save the purse from Tom's Tigress, a 100-to-1 shot, which paid $70.60 to place. Tuleyries Star was third in the field of eight.

Silvery Cloud, a $5.20 favorite, ran Crossing Over into defeat and then went on to win the second race over the 6½-furlong route. Jockey J. Feltner turned in a good riding job. Famous Clayton became a threat as the field approached the stretch, but had to be satisfied with third money. Sammy Palumbo rode his first winner of the meeting in the third race aboard Sea Finn, a sprightly daughter of Sea Rip, who knows her way around these tracks. She wrested the lead from Dixie Bell in the backstretch and went on to lead that one to the wire. Bromide went evenly and was third in the field of seven.

Miss Epe, a paddock tip that finished up the favorite, ran a game race to take the day's fourth event. She galloped to the important wire ahead of Miss Wrack and Rocky Mount. Jockey L. Garrett rode the winner, which paid $5.80.

Hot Cake, the odds-on favorite, took the day's final with ease, leading Coventry Queen by five lengths. The latter was six lengths ahead of McDonald H.

Future entry of the 2-year-olds, Windsor's Best, and Timber Lady, will be refused at this meeting, the stewards ruled. They were guilty of bumping in the fourth race.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:34. Off at 2:40. Winner, Mrs. B. A. McDonnell's ch. f. (3), by Canter—Lucie Ann. Trained by H. Clark. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:18 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
FASHION QUEEN	(Pikor)	109	5	3	1¹	1¹	1¹½	1¹½	$5.70
TOMS TIGRESS	(Stegle)	105	8	8	8¹	7¹	5¹	2¹	100.60

FOREST FAUN	(Palumbo)	120	4	6	7¹	7¹	4ʰ	5¹	1.90
SABLE ISLE	(Simpson)	110	8	5	7¹	6¹½	6ⁿ	6ⁿ	69.30
EMPRESS JULIA	(Shanks)	115	2	2	6¹	6¹	7¹	7¹	34.10
RUNANSTA	(Berg)	115	7	7	5	5	8	8	4.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FASHION QUEEN, $13.40, $7.00, $4.20; TOMS TIGRESS, $70.60, $30.40; TULEYRIES STAR, $3.20.

FASHION QUEEN fractious at the post, went to the front at once, saved ground at the turns, disposed of KENRIDGE entering the stretch, but had to be placed to punishment to hold TOMS TIGRESS safe. The latter, last away, began to better his position in midbackstretch, came with a rush in the stretch on the outside and was going fastest at the end. TULEYRIES STAR was allowed to drop out of it going to the first turn, came gamely when put to drive in stretch and can do a lot better. KENRIDGE, started from outside the gates, rushed up to press the pace, but tired suddenly entering the stretch. FOREST FAUN gained some ground in the late stages. SABLE ISLE could not keep up. The others were outrun. Private time on the race was much under official time.

SECOND RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:06½. Off at 3:10. Winner, Claud Feltner's b. f. (4), by Neddie—Sunny Cloud. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
SILVERY CLOUD	(Feltner)	111	6	5	2¹½	1ʰ	1¹½	1¹	$1.60

THUNDERLEE	(Quattlebaum)	110	8	8	8	8	8	8	60.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVERY CLOUD, $5.20, $3.40, $2.80; CROSSING OVER, $4.20, $3.40; FAMOUS CLAYTON, $3.40.

SILVERY CLOUD circled her field at the first turn to join CROSSING OVER, went to the front under hustling tactics and was put to intermittent punishment in the stretch to hold CROSSING OVER safe. The latter, first away, saved ground at the first turn, dropped back leaving the backstretch and then came again. FAMOUS CLAYTON raced in the middle of the track all the way, moved up menacingly swinging into the stretch, but bore in the final stages. GOLD STREAK went evenly, but could not threaten. MINT BUD was shuffled back, leaving the first turn. TOWEE went very wide at the first turn. WHISKORA and THUNDERLEE were never factors.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:41. Winner, Mrs. L. Beaf's b. f. (4), by Sea Rip—Daisy Thompson. Trained by M. Johnson. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:18.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
SEA FINN	(Palumbo)	115	2	4	2¹	1ʰ	1¹½	1¹½	$2.20

OUR ROSE	(Terhune)	115	7	6	6ʰ	6¹	7	7	32.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEA FINN, $6.60, $3.60, $2.60; DIXIE BEE, $4.60, $3.20; BROMIDE, $3.00.

SEA FINN, rated off the pace of DIXIE BEE until reaching the backstretch, went up on the outside of the leader, took command and drew out in the stretch under mild punishment. DIXIE BEE sprinted to the front at once, was slightly bothered when SEA FINN cut over sharply while passing her, and then tired slightly in the final drive. BROMIDE went evenly, but failed to threaten. FLAGEOLET was tardy at the break and did not run her race. HUPPY closed well from a slow beginning. OUR ROSE did not figure.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $16.80.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $300. The Brunswick. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:12½. Off at 4:16. Winner, Mrs. I. P. Engle's ch. f. (2), by Sea Rock—London Trained by R. Payne. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:52.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
MISS EPE	(Garrett)	112	5	5	2¹	1ʰ	1¹	$1.90

WINDSORS BEST	(Pikor)	115	6	2	6ʰ	6¹	7ʰ	16.20
TIMBER LADY	(Shanks)	112	4	8	8	8	8	4.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS EPE, $3.80, $4.00, $3.60; MISS WRACK, $5.40, $4.00; ROCKY MOUNT, $9.00.

MISS EPE, rushed into contention at once, shook off repeated challenge from MISS WRACK after going to the front. The latter was sprinted into the lead and continued gamely when displaced. ROCKY MOUNT saved ground all the way and came willingly at the end. DUN MIST went evenly, but was not a factor. TROSTAR swung wide at the far turn. TULEYRIES RUBY was cut down in the running and bolted into the fence approaching the far turn. WINDSORS BEST and TIMBER LADY were outrun.

FIFTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $400; allowances. The Caverns. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:41½. Winner, H. M. Simpson's ch. g. (4), by Prince of Wales—Colinport. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:04.

NURSERY PRANKS	(Hilley)	116	3	4	7	7	7	112.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE TURLEY, $3.00, $2.80, $2.60; LADY DUNLIN, $10.60, $4.60; NAY NAY, $3.00.

PRINCE TURLEY, much the best and dwelling slightly at the break, made a bold rush on the extreme outside to go to the front after the opening eighth, assumed a long lead swinging for the stretch, but was kept to a drive. LADY DUNLIN saved lots of ground swinging into the stretch and closed gamely. NAY NAY could not resist PRINCE TURLEY on the backstretch, swung wide at the final bend and is better than race shows. SCUDDER raced wide entire trip and tired nearing the end. The others were outrun.

SIXTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. The Summit Point. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, same. Went to post at 5:13. Off at 5:15½. Winner, J. S. Archer's ch. f. (4), by Light Brigade—Beauteous. Trained by R. B. Archer. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:00 2-5.

†Lost rider.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TITIAN KIDDIE, $7.80, $4.80, $4.40; MAZYNIATA, $4.60, $4.40; NATURE'S DREAM, $16.40.

TITIAN KIDDIE had raced to go to the front immediately, saved ground while drawing out, and was being taken in hand during last eighth. MAZYNIATA was best of the others, but could not threaten at any stages. NATURE'S DREAM bumped RED LABEL at the start and closed some ground in the late stages. SCOTCH AGE could not keep up. NORA'S GRACE showed a dull effort and can do better. RED LABEL lost rider at the break.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, same. Went to post at 5:47½. Off at 5:49. Winner, A. H. Utterback's ch. g. (7), by The Porter—Pancake. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:56 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOT CAKE, $3.60, $2.80, $3.00; COVENTRY QUEEN, $18.00, $8.60; McDONALD H., $4.20.

HOT CAKE shook off McDONALD H. in the opening quarter and was just steadied along in front the remainder of the way. COVENTRY QUEEN, forwardly placed from the start, easily held third when safe while showing an improved effort. McDONALD H. went wide entering the stretch and barely saved the show. PAULINE H., badly outrun for three-quarters, was carried wide by McDONALD H. when making her move entering the stretch. SCOTTY'S PRIDE and MACO were outrun.

Time Out!

By Chet Smith

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Impatience on the part of a local individual, plus the encouragement from a few unimportant boatmen has been responsible for the false and utterly ridiculous statement that "bluefish are being caught at Southwest and Northwest Middles, Deal Island and the Gooses." Bluefish are not being caught in Chesapeake Bay north of the bay side of Cape Charles, Va., in the immediate vicinity) and they are only stragglers. The run of blues will not start for some time, being quite contented in their present atmosphere where bait is very plentiful —Oregon Inlet, N. C.

Don't let this source of "comeon" get you stirred up for some blue fishing, because it is solely for the purpose of stimulating business for certain boatmen that find cold weather has undermined their former early business. "Blue fishing" —two words that make a real out of bed before he s supposed to. But to disappoint him with such erroneous statements is not according to Ike Walton, Edgar Guest nor "Out Fishin'."

The writer, in company with one of the best anglers in this neck of the woods, went to Deal Island on Saturday to check up on the boat captain who is supposed to have piloted a local party of anglers who landed a few blue fish and found that it was a hoax, as we suspected. The same news was received when we arrived at Ridge, Md. (St. Jeromes Creek). "No blufish have been caught this season and none are expected for tome time."

Weather Was Ideal.

The weather was ideal, the water in perfect condition for trolling, so, we tried the Middle Grounds for a couple of hours without a sign of life, using lures that couldn't have been refused if a single blue fish had been in the vicinity. We came ashore and talked to every captain and all agreed that we had a long time ago arrived at the correct solution—why bluefish didn't come up ot their feeding grounds as early this spring as last, when the first were caught on June 11 by my companion. In shallow water a few blues have been caught by commercial fishermen in nets, but none by hook and line.

There cannot be even a mild migration of bluefish into the Chesapeake Bay area or its tributaries until the weather is sufficiently hot enough to raise the present low temperature of the water to that required by small bait fish, viz: menhaden or alewives, shiners and other small species of food fish upon which the blue fish feed and follow from day to day, year after year their food supply. If one will only remember this: the small fish attract the large and the size of the mouth and stomach of any fish must be filled, sometime, or he will also suffer from the hunger of a larger fish and perish. Did you ever see a school of porpoise work into a school of savage, cutting and destructive blue fish and watch the porpoise toss them up into the air and catch them before they hit the water? Food—that is the answer to all fishing questions, including inclement weather when the food fish move, then too do the larger fish also move.

A 31-pound Bass.

One year ago yesterday this writer landed a 31-pound channel bass on S. W. Middles and lost another, hence his desire to try a year later. Occasionally a large school of menhaden will leave their feeding waters because of pursuit, usually by bluefish, and migrate sooner to Northern waters, the bluefish following in their wake, with the result that the news leaks out that bluefish have arrived in certain waters, temporarily, but immediately scattering. When trapped in nets they are then known as stragglers. When the bluefish arrive in our waters there won't be any doubt of their appearance—authentic news by authetnic writers will advise you as to their whereabouts and we will probably join the cavalcade for our share of the sport.

Fishing over Saturday and Sunday couldn't have been better at Deal Island or on the "edge" at N. W. Middles. Hardheads were very plentiful in both places, if you had enough bait. We didn't and quit with 216 hardheads and 10 trout; all were brought back to this city and distributed. Many of the 48 boats fishing at Deals had as high as 600 fish, a great many of them trout weighing from 1½ to 5 pounds; the average was around 2½ pounds. The croakers this season are not running as large as in former years. They are mixed weight, all of them, from a pound up to 3 pounds, but it is certain with a few more days of hot s

Roosevelt's Stadium Is Scene

INTER-HIGH STANDINGS.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Central	3	1	.750
Western	3	1	.750
Tech	2	2	.500
Eastern	1	3	.250
Roosevelt	1	3	.250

With the inter-high championship and the big Clark Griffith Trophy which goes with it more or less balanced on the left arm of young Arnold Heft, Central and Western will collide today at Roosevelt Stadium in a post-season playoff game to decide the 1936 title.

Western faces the unenviable prospect at 3:30 p. m. of solving the same portside slants of Mr. Heft which lifted Central into a tie for the series lead with baffling victories over Eastern and Roosevelt. On the face of the records Central has the hitting power to support the young man's pitching performance.

The first game between the two teams found Central outhitting the Georgetowners, getting ten hits off lean Leaton Kushman. Heft was recovering from an illness at that time and Western pounded Lefty Rowles of Central for eight hits, winning, 7 to 5.

Heft is in very good health today, however. In fact he has been for the past week and a half, during which he set Eastern back with six hits and shut out Roosevelt with two hits.

Coach Cliff Moore of Western is undetermined whether or not he will use Kushman for the fifth straight time in the series. He has the veterans, Bob Raftery and Ted Kingsman, ready for the assignment. Both are right-handers.

Whoever pitches, he will be meeting a Central team which has banged out at least eight hits in every series start. With Heft heaving 'em over for Central, the Western pitching can afford to yield Central hits infrequently at best.

Heft, on the other hand, will be running into some of the series' leading hitters, including Bill Edmonston, who is No. 1 hitter of the series; Dickie Lynham, who is hitting around .400, and Jackie Lawyer, who is hitting about the same.

The Western pitching faces slugging Bernie Askin, who has collected a couple of home runs this series; Joe Moran, who is hitting about .400, and Lefty Rowles, another .350 hitter.

Gaithersburg Defeats Colesville Nine, 15-10

Colesville, Md., June 1.—The Colesville Cardinals dropped their third game in succession here Sunday, losing to the Gaithersburg A. C. by a score of 15 to 10. The Cardinals' pitching ace, Eddie Heim, left the box in the fourth inning and Joe Gibson, center fielder, in the role of relief pitcher, held the opposition to one hit in the remaining five innings.

Procurement in 14-0 Win; Bell Gives 1 Hit

Procurement Division went into a tie for first place in the Federal Double-A League of the Post Sandlot Association yesterday, swamping A. G. O. War Department, 14 to 0. It was the winner's fifth win in seven league starts.

Wes Bell, ace moundsman of the Procurement team, held the Generals to one hit, retiring the losers in order every inning. Ely, Miller and Colliflower hit home runs. The one hit was a single by Waicikaukas, who later was out when he attempted to steal. Only 21 men faced Bell in the seven innings.

Women Golfers Return From Triumph

U. S. Curtis Cup Players Now Placing Variety of Tournaments.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 1.—America's women golfers, who retained possession of the Curtis cup in the team matches with England, returned home on the Queen Mary today with plans to swing right into tournament play in this country.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, will be the first to get into competition as she plans to enter the Western Open at Topeka next week. Patty Berg, youthful Minneapolis star, and Marion Miley, of Lexington, plan to play in the trans-Mississippi at Denver, June 22-27, while Miss Miley hopes to be able to defend her Kentucky State championship in the tournament starting at Owensboro, June 16.

"I prefer to enter the bigger tournament at Denver," said Miss Miley, "but if I can possibly make it I'll also play at Owensboro."

Other members of the team plan short rests before starting tournament play. They are Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Ft. Worth; Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, captain of the team, from Philadelphia; Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Coral Gables, Fla.; Charlotte Glutting, of South Orange, N. J., and Mrs. Leona Cheney, of Los Angeles.

Miss Miley and Mrs. Crews planned to leave New York for home tonight, while the others planned to stay around, do some shopping, and maybe play a little golf.

American Polo Team Again Is Victor

International Five Wins Over English by 20-5 Score.

London, June 1 (AP).—Paced by Mike Phipps, America's international polo team scored another one-sided victory today, defeating a 30-goal combination, known as "The Rest," 20 to 5, before a fashionable Whitsuntide holiday crowd of 5,000 at Hurlingam.

Phipps scored eight goals as the Americans encountered the sternest opposition they have met in preparing for the international matches against England June 10, 13 and 20. Eric Pedley and Winston Guest counted five times each, while Stewart Iglehart added the other two goals.

With three Americans—Jimmy Mills, Ebby Gerry and Bobby Strawbridge teaming with the Maharajah of Jaipur, "The Rest" played the international four on even terms for two chukkurs as each team scored five goals. The Rest is the same team which the English international four beat only 10 to 7 at Roehampton.

After the first two periods, the opposition to the Americans faded and at the end of the match Hurlingam experts were shaking their heads as they agreed the visitors still were the best team ever seen in England.

Hyattsville Plays Mt. Rainier Today

Even though the baseball game today at 3 o'clock on the Mount Rainier field between Mount Rainier and Hyattsville will have no bearing upon the intra-country standing, the coaches of both games are anxious to cop the battle that will ring down the curtain for scholastic activities in Prince Georges County.

Coach Roland Slicker stated yesterday that the following boys will see action: Stewart Weyforth, catcher; John Fleshman, first base; Richard Thomas, second base; Richard Reamy, third base; Nathaniel Mostow, shortstop; John Crown, centerfield; Charles Ferrara, leftfield; Julian Wells or John Moran, rightfield. Harry Hill a lad who has won all of his games to date, will be on the mound.

Eastern-Tech Profs Commit Game Today

The student bodies and teachers of Tech and Eastern were somewhat agog yesterday as final preparations went forward for the annual game between the faculty teams of the two schools today. The classic will be committed at Eastern Stadium at 3 p. m., with Eastern seeking revenge for its defeat of last year.

Prof. Misieck, of the Tech electricity shop, will play first, where he is expected to urn in a shocking performance. Prof. Schutte, of the machine shop, will be the keystone cog, and Prof. Meier, of the biology department, will take care of third, with Prof. Clark at short.

Rusty Thompson, Tech basketball coach, who is rumored to be a genuine athlete, will pitch, with Artie Wondrack behind the plate. The outfield will be composed of a shop instructor, a biology teacher and a business professor by the name of Williams, Ralston and Waltz, respectively.

Profs. Pursell, of the business school, and Richardson, of the history department, will be held in reserve. Coach Ed Foxley, who has pitched for Tech in the past, will be unable to appear.

At a late hour last night reports from Eastern said Coach Charlie Guyon was still expecting to start in the box for Eastern, with James Suber ready in the bullpen should the chief falter. Artie Boyd, Jack Knight, Mike Kelly, John Paul Collins, Tom Holmes, Hank Flury, Knox, Winnemore and Fuchs will complete the line-up.

Prize Moneys Of $29,850 To Meyer

Winner of Indianapolis Classic Also Awarded Auto and Trophies.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 1.—Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., collected $29,850 in cash, a high-priced automobile and several trophies tonight for his third victory in 500-mile races.

The California Comet won last Saturday's speed classic in the record breaking speed of 109.069 miles an hour. He previously had won in 1928 and 1933.

Ted Horn, Los Angeles youngster, collected a total of $12,625 for finishing second, George (Doc) Mackenzie, of Eddington, Pa., who finished third with the aid of Kelly Petillo, of Huntington Park, Calif., who owned the car and drove as reief pilot, received checks for $6,400.

First Prize of $20,000.

The prizes were awarded at a dinner given here tonight in honor of the drivers who participated in last Saturday's race. Peter de Paolo, who won here in 1925, was master of ceremonies at the dinner.

Meyer, who drove his own car, collected $28,000 from the Speedway for first prize. He wan $2,000 in lap prize money. The other checks he received tonight came from automotive accessary companies, whose parts he used in his speedster.

Horn got $10,000 from the Speedway for second place and $2,625 in other awards.

Engraving 11-4 Victor Over Loans, Currency

With Pitcher Hurley allowing four hits and fanning 15 men, Bureau of Engraving defeated Loans Currency, 11 to 4, yesterday in a Departmental League game of The Post Sandlot Association. Hurley also helped his own cause by clouting a home run. Jameson of the same team also connected for the circuit.

Bonus Finance Will Cut Into Bank Reserves

Increase Expected After Government Begins Payments.

New York, June 1.—Analyzing the effects of the Treasury's heavy June 15 financing and bonus payments, the National City Bank says in its monthly letter today:

Of interest in connection with money market prospects is the heavy volume of Treasury financing scheduled for June 15 and and subsequent payment of the soldiers' bonus. Treasury financing has been announced to a total of something over $2,000,000,000—a peace-time record—of which $1,000,000,000 will be new money and the balance refinancing.

"If the experience of the December and March financing operations is repeated, the first effects of the sale of new securities on the fifteenth will be a sharp drop in the reserves and deposits of the commercial banks as funds to pay for the new issues are checked into the Reserve Banks acting as fiscal agents of the Treasury.

"Later, as these funds are paid out by the Government in discharge of bonus and other obligations, both reserves and deposits will again increase.

"Should the Treasury at that time pay out all its balances at the Reserve Banks, including the $550,000,000 now on deposit, the effect would be to carry excess bank reserves to new high levels. This, however, does not appear to be likely as the Treasury is reported to be averse to seeing excess reserves increased unduly beyond present levels, and to be planning to so arrange its payments as to cause a minimum of disturbance of the present situation.

"This it can easily do by continuing to carry a substantial balance in the Reserve Banks, and paying its bills by drawing on its balances in the commercial banks."

Steel Output Turns Up to 68.2 Per Cent

New York, June 1 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute today estimated steel production during the current week at 68.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 67.9 per cent in the preceding week and 70.1 a month ago.

The advance over the preceding week was .3 of 1 point. A year ago the industry was operating at an estimated average of 39.5 per cent.

Continued Rise In Rents Spurs New Building

Lower Commodity Prices Indicate Peak May Be Near.

New York, June 1.—The rise in rents, which began in February, 1934, and which has been one of the primary factors stimulating the current building expansion, was extended in April. The rent index, based on 1926 as 100, rose from 73.7 in March to 74.9 in April. A year ago, the index was 68.7 and, at the depression in January, 1934, it was 61.8.

The rent level in April this year was thus 21.2 per cent above the law. Rents in April, however, were still well below the cost of building, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The cost of building index at the beginning of May was 97.8 as compared with the rent index of 74.9 in April. This discrepancy is the major reason why building in the current expansion movement has recovered only a small part of the ground lost during the depression.

It is apparent that a further expansion of building activity will depend on either a further rise in rents or a reduction in building costs. At the present time the trend of building costs is not favorable, the index having risen from 93.7 in December to the current figure of 97.8. A year ago, the index was 93.3. Rents, however, may show further rise. Rents lag behind commodity prices and they have not yet accounted for the full rise in prices.

The difference, however, is only slight since commodity prices have not advanced over the past year. Consequently, unless commodity prices renew their upward movement, it may be expected that the rise in rents will soon be halted at a level not far above the present one.

Commodity prices have lately shown a tendency to weaken and there is evidence that a recession is under way. If this proves to be the case, rents may be lower next year than at the present time. Under such conditions, the recovery in building activity is likely to receive a set-back. Such a set-back, however, should make for lower building costs which would result in a renewal of the building expansion movement.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stock Prices Harden Gradually in Quiet Trading; Steel Shares Leading.

New York, June 1.—Holiday refreshment was enough to stiffen prices for stocks and bonds, but it did not bring much change in activity. Stock turnover was again dull at around 800,000 shares. Prices were a little higher at the opening and gained slightly more toward the close. The trading day was unmarked by any pronounced flurries in either direction. September wheat closed an eighth of a cent lower at 84⅝ cents a bushel.

Even granting the ample preparation which the markets and the country have had for the flotation of two billions of Government obligations, half of which is to raise new money to be promptly squandered on a soldiers' bonus, the spectacle should have had a depressing effect. However, it did not appear to do so, so pleasant has become the taste of the spending drug. The banks will make a little profit out of the operation, corporations will gather in many hundreds of millions from the sale of products to recipients of the bonus, the budget will lurch a good deal further out of balance, and finally the tax collector will stun the victims to lighten the pain of paying for it all.

The bonus deal is spectacular because, as press reports state, it involves the largest single bit of peacetime financing; but the billion of new money now being raised is but a small portion of that which has been raised for much less sensible uses—as, for instance, the makework schemes, boondoggling under the guise of relief, Florida canals and Montana power dams—and the end is by no means in sight.

Government bonds were slightly firmer, with expectation of still easier money conditions and Treasury support. Foreign exchanges were dull, mainly because European centers were on holiday. Rates were inclined to stiffen a little.

Steel Shares Leaders.

In stocks the steel section was among the best, largely because of the upturn in the operating rate of the industry. Gains of 1 to 2 points were made. U. S. Steel sold at the best price in a month. Youngstown continued the favorite among the independents. Many of the rails rose a good fraction of a point, and the rail equipments were even more buoyant, climbing as much as 2 points.

Chemical stocks were strong. Allied recrossed the 200 mark. Chrysler and General Motors were narrow. Merchandising shares were higher with the approach of the bonus season. Small gains were in the majority for the rubbers, tobaccos, amusements, metals, foods, utilities and oils. Mail orders were strong. Sears sold at the highest price in years.

Among the miscellaneous issues, Commercial Investment, selling ex dividend 20 per cent in stocks, rose more than 2 points before profit taking topped it. Radio, in the background for some time, led the market in turnover. Warner Brothers and Paramount were active and higher. American Smelting, with a dividend meeting set for tomorrow, gained 2 points to a price that shows a yield of 2 per cent. Certainteed was strong in the preferred and weak in the common on publication of a recapitalization plan.

Business Improves.

Markets reopened from the holidays with a good deal of reassurance. Nothing untoward had happened in France. Congress appeared to be baffled by new taxation measures and the industrial news continued to show well-sustained industrial activity. The steel industry again refused to turn down in accordance with the seasonal trend. Operations this week, as estimated by the American Iron & Steel Institute, will rise 3 points to 68.2 per cent of capacity. That is almost as high as the rate a month ago. Last year at this time the mills were operating at only 39.5 per cent of capacity.

Such a good rate reflects unexpected endurance in the automotive industry, a revival, if a slow one, in the building construction industry, increased railroad buying, good farm implement demand and a firm market for miscellaneous products. If, as the Presidential campaign progresses, the market and industry should suffer chills, they at least will come up to convention time in good condition.

This healthy state of affairs in business is bound to do much to overcome the debilitating effect of the decline in stock prices a month ago. If continued, it will once more bring speculation into stocks in sufficient volume to start a fresh bull market. Looking backward, the break in April appears more and more to have been chiefly one of those internal corrections that always take place after a long advance.

Stock Movements.

Great Northern rights went off the board at noon. They were fairly active in the morning on a cash basis . . . Another plane wreck sent down the stock of TWA by half a point or so. Other airplane issues were fairly firm . . . It is seldom that any other stock is needed as a build-up for Radio, but something of the sort has occurred this time. The sharp rise in Zenith, accompanied by stories of expanding trade, has brought on a sympathetic advance in Radio Corporation, which is looking stronger than it has for several weeks . . . Pullman strengthened a point as the lower fares took effect. Many observers take two things for granted, i. e., that the lower fares will increase railway and Pullman travel, and that no return to the higher rates will be possible, regardless of court decisions . . . Zenith was only slightly higher on its good earnings report for the year ended April 30, showing that those with first knowledge are still able to trade.

Certain-teed.

It isn't often that the market sees such realignment of prices that sends a preferred stock to a new high record at the same time the common stock of the same company is sinking to a new low price, That happened today in Certain-teed. The preferred stock is controlled by Pheonix Securities, which has an option to buy more, and which apparently thinks well of its chances to obtain liquidation in some form of over $50 a share in dividend arrears. The preferred issue has the sole voting power. A plan for recapitalization was announced that virtually wipes out the consumer.

Columbia Oil.

Columbia Oil & Gasoline voting trust certificates were suspended from the unlisted trading department of the curb exchange, creating some disturbance. The business has brought a good deal of money to curb brokers, who do not care to lose even a portion of it to the over-the-counter dealers. Suspension was caused by a decision made a few days ago of the voting trustees to terminate the trust agreement. Trading in the stock itself cannot begin until listing formalities are observed, although some curb members hope a short cut may be found. Perhaps the curb could trade in the stock on a "when unlisted" basis. The stock was given Columbia Gas & Electric shareholders in 1930.

May Offerings Are Smallest For 3 Months

45 Bond Issues and 8 of Stock Make Total of $261,982,000.

New York, June 1.—Securities offerings to the public here in May were the smallest in volume in three months. Offerings amounted to $261,982,000, of which $249,316,000 represented 45 bond issues and $12,666,000 eight stock issues, compared with $926,771,000 in April, when $886,087,000 was accounted for in 63 bond issues and $40,684,000 in 17 stock issues. In May last year offerings aggregated $209,805,000, consisting of $183,289,000 for 48 bond issues and $26,516,000 for four stock issues.

In the first five months of 1936, bond offerings totaled $2,244,174,000 for 292 issues, against $1,053,946,000 for 213 issues in the corresponding period of 1935. Of the new bond issues this year, the bulk were for public utility corporations with a total of $759,358,000 for 36 issues. Last year the largest classification was $445,052,000 for the State and municipal group, wherein 181 issues were marketed.

Stock offerings this year in the first five months amounted to $116,406,000 for 50 issues, compared with $32,803,000 for seven issues in the same period last year. In both years the bulk of the financing was in the industrial field.

Curb Prices Firm In Realizing

New York, June 1 (AP). — Curb market stocks held fairly steady on the upside today despite a sudden flurry of profit taking toward the close. Trading was more active, especially when the market was making its best strides during the forenoon. Sales approximated 183,000 shares, compared with 161,000 last Friday.

Aluminum Co. worked up from 121 to 124 but dropped back a point from the day's high to end at 123, up 2 points on balance. Axton-Fisher climbed 1½ to 46, and gains of minor fractions to around a point were registered by American Cyanamid "B," American Gas, Electric Bond & Share preferred, Excello Aircraft, Glen Alden and New Jersey Zinc. Fisk Rubber preferred lost another 3 points and declines of fractions or more were shown by E. W. Bliss, Humble Oil, Newmont Mining and United Light & Power preferred.

Armour Completes Big New Plant

Chicago, June 1 (AP).—Armour & Co.'s new beef house in the stockyards, which the packng concern claims is the largest structure of its kind in the United States, has been completed and operations in it will begin in a few days, it was announced today.

The capacity of the plant for single shift operation will be 12,000 cattle a week. Operations will be performed on six levels and a visitors gallery is located above the sixth flcor.

Crystal Sugar Calls 7 Per Cent Preferred

New York, June 1 (AP).—The American Crystal Sugar Co. has called for redemption, July 1, its remaining outstanding 7 per cent preferred stock.

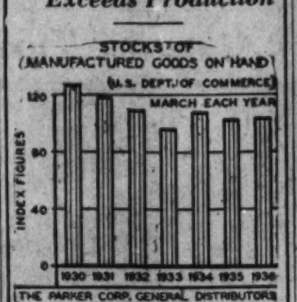
Goods Distribution Exceeds Production



Boston, Mass., June 1.—Industrial production, as measured by the Federal Reserve Board Index, is running 6½ per cent above a year ago. Stocks of manufactured goods on hand, however, are only 1 per cent greater than last year, and up only 7 per cent from 1933.

RFC Gets Plan To Reorganize M. & St. L. Road

Proposal Includes Loan of $5,000,000 From U. S. and Other Aid.

By the Associated Press.

A bondholders' plan for reorganization of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad through a Reconstruction Corporation loan of $5,000,000 and a private loan of $1,000,000 was proposed yesterday to the RFC.

The plan was submitted to Chairman Jesse H. Jones by Philip Roosevelt, New York, chairman of a bondholders' committee. It was made known by Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, chairman of an Interstate Commerce sub-committee, which has been investigating a proposal to sell and dismember the road.

The plan as outlined by Shipstead called for issuance of $17,000,000 in new securities, $5,000,000 of which would be in first mortgage 4 per cent bonds to be issued to the RFC as security for its loan. The holders of $4,286,000 of old bonds would receive $12,000,000 of the new bond in place of the old.

In addition, Roosevelt wrote Frederick H. Prince, Boston banker and investor in the road, had agreed to lend $1,00,000 on ten-year notes at 4½ per cent.

The RFC loan would go toward lifting the receivership under which the road has been operating since 1923 and the Prince loan would be turned over to an operating company for equipment and operating needs.

The plan contemplated formation of separate owning and operating companies, the former to be known as the Minneapolis-St. Louis Railroad Co. and the latter as the Minneapolis-St. Louis Railway Co.

"It became apparent at the hearing," Shipstead told newsmen, "that the RFC had no reliable information about the road since the inspection they made in 1933. Mr. Jones has promised me that he will have an examination made by impartial engineers.

"I am confident that when he has done so he will have no hesitancy in deciding the proposed bondholders' plan is far more in the public interest than the plan proposed by the competing railroads, whose plan would remove a competitor, leave 47 communities without rail service and put 1,800 to 2,600 men out of work."

European Markets Closed for Whitsuntide

London, June 1.—The London stock exchange and all English commodity markets are closed today in observance of Whitmonday.

The Paris bourse, Havre coffee markets and virtually all other continental exchanges also are closed for the holiday.

Herriot Revives War Debt Issue Among Leftists

Willing to Head Mission to U. S., He Tells New Chamber Session.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 1.—France's new left wing-controlled Chamber of Deputies met briefly and serenely today, but many members believed it might be the calm before the storm.

Coincident with the perfunctory session, Edquard Herriot, the former premier who long has been a staunch advocate of American war debt payment, again brought the debt issue into the picture.

Speaking informally, Herriot reaffirmed his support of "an effort to pay the debt" and said he was willing to go to the United States on a mission connected with the issue.

Blum Silent on Issue.

The former premier, who lost that post four years ago because of his insistence that the debt be paid, added he believed a majority of the new chamber and ministry-to-be shared his views. There was, however, no indication of such a sentiment from Leon Blum, the premier-designate.

The concrete problems of strikes, foreign relations and monetary policies must be faced by Blum and his new Leftist cabinet, which is expected to take over the government Thursday from Premier Albert Sarraut.

War Warning Issued.

Today's session was marked only by another warning of the imminence of war and a faint hubhub created in the gallery by suffragettes.

The chamber will meet again Wednesday morning.

The strikes of metal workers and attendant industries, which at their crest last week saw a total of 80,000 strikers occupying factories, were said to be well on the road to settlement.

The Federal Diary

A blow to nearly 3,000,000 women in the country and a disaster to social welfare progress in general was what Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, termed yesterday's Supreme Court decision invalidating the minimum wage law for women and children in New York.

The court disposed of the case with a 5-to-4 decision and Miss Anderson, whose division in the Labor Department works for better employment conditions for women, declared she had "kept my fingers crossed hoping for the opposite decision."

"The point is that this decision affects far more than New York State, for, while seven other States had minimum wage laws, the whole idea of regulating wages and working conditions has received a body blow. The District of Columbia has no such law, but with a favorable decision not only the District but other sections of the country might have taken action to secure such laws," she said.

At Mercy of Exploiters.

"Women and children are now left to the mercy of anyone who wants to exploit their work. This is the crux of much of our social trouble today. Our investigations in the bureau show that women are paid extremely low wages in many places and the matter of individual freedom of contract is a myth, no matter what the decision may say on that.

"When a person has to have a job or starve, there isn't much to that high-sounding phrase of individual right to make a contract.

"The employer suffers, too, for he is now subject to unfair and cut-throat competition from which he was protected before in the States with minimum wage laws.

"If we can't have legislation along this line, what are we going to do?" she asked.

The largest Government exhibit ever collected for the public is on its way South today for the thousands to see who will attend the Texas Centennial Exposition which opens in Dallas on June 6 and continues until Armistice Day.

This is the postoffice exhibit, valued conservatively by postal authorities as "well over a million dollars" for those things which have definite values in the open market and of "incalculable value" for several show-pieces which are so rare as never to have been priced.

Movies, Stamps in Exhibit.

In the exhibit there are sound films giving a pictorial history of the postal service; there are pictures showing the travels of a postage stamp from the time it comes from the brain of its designer until it is canceled and reaches its ultimate death on a discarded letter in somebody's wastebasket, and there are veritable text books on how one of the largest Government departments operates.

But the prize exhibit that will make the mouths of philatelists water with envy is the largest stamp collection ever gathered by the department and the dye proofs or original drawings for stamps which are so closely guarded and highly valued as never to have reached the public stamp markets.

The first United States postage stamps, officially called the antebellum issues of 1847 and 1851, are among the most valuable, but the exhibit also includes stamps from all of the Government issues.

For months the preparation of this exhibit has been going on under the direction of Charles F. Anderson, mechanical expert of the Postoffice Department, who, with special guards, will be in charge of it in Texas. Anderson, by the way, might be called the most traveled person in the whole department, for he was the one who accompanied Admiral Byrd on his last trip to the South Pole as the postmaster of the expedition. The solicitor of the department, Karl A. Crowley, has taken a special interest in the exhibit because Texas is his native State and he wants his department to do itself proud at his State celebration.

Song of a Sufferer.

Here's to the honkers of horns
Who violate traffic rules;
Here's to romantic parkers—
Most foolish of all earth's fools;
Here's to the midnight drunks
Who disturb our peaceful street;
Here's to our tap-dancing neighbors
Who can't control their feet;
Here's to the radio addicts
Who listen all night at a sitting.
To exile all these pests
MATTIE RICHARDS TYLER,
Register's Office, Treasury.

It is already midsummer over in the offices of the National Parks Commission for all their work for the approaching tourist season, which will bring several million people to the parks, has been done. But they admit they are a little ahead of the season for the weather man still reports the mild weather of early summer here.

Last year over 3,000,000 people visited the parks, and a far greater number is expected this year. That is why additional camping sites and more cabins have been built in the wide-open spaces of Uncle Sam's vacation grounds.

Over 15,000 CCC boys have been working for months improving the trails for hikers and horseback riders, and the commission even made a recent survey of the air fields within an 80-mile radius of each park so that those who wished to visit the national parks by air could have information as to what facilities were available.

Il Duce Carves Ethiopian Area In 3 Provinces

Fascists Impose Control on Wheat, Fearing New War Is Near.

By the United Press.

Rome, June 1.—In defiance of the League of Nations, Great Britain and the other sanctionist powers, the Italian cabinet today carved Ethiopia into three states, added them to Eritrea and Italian Somaliland and proclaimed a new Roman Empire.

Simultaneously, the government tightened its hold on the Italian wheat market when the cabinet approved a law providing for "totalitarian accumulation of wheat."

Only the necessities for direct consumption or sowing are excluded from the law, which also provides for a price fixed by the government, thus facilitating national distribution of the commodity in event of war, which she fears is coming, perhaps as result of the Fascist conquest of Ethiopia.

Il Duce Presides.

Il Duce himself presided over the cabinet session in which the three Fascist states of Ethiopia were created.

Division of Emperor Haile Selassie's conquered kingdom was made in accordance with geographical position, and historical, cultural and linguistic ties, as follows.

1. Eritrea, with the seat of the regional government at Asmara.

2. Amhara, with the capital at Gondar. Amhara, in northwestern Ethiopia, includes the controversial Lake Tana region, for many years Britain's special sphere of influence, and is bordered on the west by the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

3. Galla and Sidamo provinces, with the capital at Gimma. This territory is in southwestern Ethiopia. Italian troops have not yet occupied all of it.

4. Harrar, with the capital at the City of Harrar, in southeastern Ethiopia.

Addis Is Capital.

The central government of the East African empire will be at historic Addis Ababa. It will be headed by a viceroy, to be assisted by a council of government composed of high officials and a general, including six Italians selected among farmers, merchants and industrialists, and six prominent natives.

Marshal Rodolfo Graziani is acting viceroy of Ethiopia and is generally expected to be named viceroy shortly to succeed Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of the Italian armies during the campaign. Badoglio is not expected to return to Ethiopia.

North China

nese on widespread Japanese operations in the north, caused withdrawal from service of seven Chinese coastal vessels and had a grave effect on American and other foreign commerce.

Japanese Goods Seized.

The government, its revenues depleted, was reported having trouble raising the June installment on foreign loans and other obligations secured by customs returns. Officials considered the enactment of laws to compel stock book submission and pledges against the acceptance of contrabond from every industrial establishment in the country.

The secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce here cabled the United States Chamber of Commerce at Washington, declaring Japanese smuggling had cost the Chinese government 8,000,000 Shanghai dollars (about $2,400,000) during April alone, and that the illicit trade was increasing enormously. A similar message was sent to London by the British Chamber of Commerce.

Arrests Ordered.

The Tientsin municipality ordered police to arrest persons responsible for the railroad bombings within three days, no matter what their nationality.

Some foreign circles suggested the affair bore some of the earmarks of a noted incident at Mukden, now in Manchukuo, where, Japanese asserted, the Chinese deliberately blew up a railroad to frustrate Japanese military plans.

They included the right to build railroads, military and civil air bases and army barracks in China; establishment of regular aerial communications between Japan and China, and a paramount economic, political and military position for Japan on the mainland.

Mongolia Penetrated.

Dolnor, Inner Mongolia, June 1 (AP).—Over ancient caravan routes established by Genghis Khan, Tamerlane and Kublai Khan when Mongolia was a great empire, Japanese army automobiles and trucks are swarming today in ever-increasing numbers.

Chinese officials regard this as part of a Japanese plan to make Inner Mongolia, claimed by China, a "second Manchukuo" in order to cut off Soviet Russia from China.

As Mongolia's almost limitless deserts, severe winters and lack of raw materials make Inner Mongolia unsuitable for Japanese colonization, Japanese admit their penetration of this part of Asia is military rather than commercial.

Army Seizes Monastery.

The Japanese have not tried to camouflage their military movements in these barren lands, whose inhabitants are simple nomads. They have boldly established military headquarters in the famous Buddhist Monastery at Pailingmiao, capital of Inner Mongolia.

Here they have installed as the nominal ruler of Inner Mongolia the complacent Mongol Prince Teh Wang, who under Japanese influence apparently has deserted China, to which he formerly was loyal.

Eclipse Party, Signals Tardy, Cables Regrets

Geographic-Georgetown U. Believed Delayed in Preparations.

Difficulty in setting up equipment is believed to have been experienced by the National Geographic-Georgetown University expedition in Siberia to photograph the forthcoming total eclipse with the receipt yesterday at the Naval Observatory of a telegram from the group.

The expedition had originally been expected to establish contact with the Naval Observatory more than two weeks ago. The Observatory, which is to broadcast special time signals an hour before and one hour after the totality of the eclipse June 19, planned to broadcast test signals for a month to insure best.

In their cablegram received yesterday by Capt. Julius P. Hellweg, retired, naval officer in charge of the observatory, the scientists stated that they were prepared to receive the test signals and apologized for "being so late." They gave no reason for the delay.

From the National Geographic Society it was learned the group arrived as Gustenai, Siberia, the spot chosen to observe the eclipse, on May 15, indicating considerable trouble in setting up equiment.

On The Air Today

Ed Wynn has another innovation for his audience. That old line about "Graham, the program is going to be different tonight," is taking on a new wallop. You may remember that a week or so ago Wynn interviewed Emil Kasper, father of the Passaic quadruplets. Each week, now, the lisping comedian plans to present a visitor on his program—some person far from the ranks of the conventional artist, and of unusual interest from the names of prominence in the week's news.

No announcement will be made in advance. The guest will always be Wynn's secret and the audience's surprise. The Wynn show is presented Tuesday nights, WRC, at 8:30.

"You and Your Happiness" is being introduced this week in a new daily-except-Saturday-and-Sunday schedule from WJSV, at 11 a. m. Five women outstanding in their fields and a distinguished physician form the talent. The series replaces the "Woman's Place" series for Columbia.

The five women: Lilian Lauferty, author, who serves as mistress of ceremonies; Alice Hughes, fashion editor; Mrs. Cora Fields, housewife and a newcomer to radio; Grand Duchess Marie and Ethel Cotton, authority on the art of conversation. The physician, following the practice of his profession, remains anonymous.

Featured today:

Civil War: Eddie Dowling and Ray Dooley will fight it all over again in a burlesque entitled "So Red the Nose," WRC, at 9.

Fashions: New type of broadcast from Fur Fashion Exposition, WMAL, at 3:30, with men as commentators and emphasis on romance and novelty, rather than frills and ruffles.

String Symphony: Direction of Frank Black, presenting Nikolai Miaskowsky, Russian composer, WMAL, at 9.

Errol Flynn: Does a "Pirate Night" sketch at "Parties at Pickfair," WJSV, at 9. Also Hugh Herbert, screen comedian.

Those several thousand delegates in town for the Associated Country Women of the World convention are not being overlooked by radio. No, sir. At 1:30 WMAL presents a round table discussion featuring delegates from ten foreign countries. Miss Grace E. Frysinger, senior home economist of the office of co-operative extension work, Department of Agriculture, will preside. Those foreign countries are South Africa, Switzerland, Sweden, Wales, Rhodesia, Canada, England, Germany, India and Scotland.

There's an old wheeze in the show business that every comic wants to do Hamlet, every bicycle rider wishes he could sing and every songstress wishes she had learned to tap dance. Well, the happiest girl around the Chicago studios of N. B. C. these days is Gale Page, personality singer, who signed this week to join the cast of "Today's Children." Miss Page is one

Auction Sales

TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 1936—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE INDUSTRIAL ZONE REAL ESTATE CONSISTING OF AN OFFICE AND WOODEN SHEDS KNOWN AS 3225 K (WATER) STREET, AND TWO BRICK DWELLINGS KNOWN AS PREMISES 3219-3221 K (WATER) STREET N.W.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust duly recorded March 6, 1934, in liber 6781, folio 507, et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and by request of the party secured thereby the undersigned trustees will sell at public auction, in front of the premises on TUESDAY, THE SECOND DAY OF JUNE, 1936, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situated in the District of Columbia and designated as being parts of lots No. 75 and 76, in square No. 1188, beginning at a point where the east line of what is known as Cecil alley intersects Water street, and running thence southeasterly along the north line of Water street, a distance of 113.16 feet, more or less; thence northerly a distance of 134.95 feet, more or less, to what is known as West alley, thence westerly along the south line of said West alley, 61.66 feet, more or less, to the east line of said lot numbered seventy-six (76), thence northerly with said east line of said lot numbered seventy-six (76) a distance of 11.25 feet, more or less, thence westerly a distance of 46.25 feet, more or less, to a point on the east line of Cecil alley, 117 feet north of the point of beginning, and thence southerly along the east line of Cecil alley, a distance of 117 feet, more or less, to the point of beginning.

TERMS OF SALE: Said property is subject to a deed of trust securing an indebtedness of $5,000.00, as recorded June 30, 1933, in liber 6739, folio 423, and subject further to a deed of trust securing an indebtedness of $1,000.00, recorded February 1, 1934, in liber 6776, folio 443, and said property will be sold subject to said deeds of trust and subject to certain defects in title as will be more fully described at the time of sale. Of the purchase money over and above said deeds of trust the purchaser is to pay $1,000 cash; interest and taxes to be paid or adjusted to date of sale. A deposit of $500 will be required at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., to be at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty (30) days from day of sale, otherwise deposit will be forfeited and property resold at the risk and costs of defaulting purchaser after five days' advertisement in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., of such resale.

Farm Women's Parley Is Told Of Foreign Aid

Film Describing Work of Demonstration Groups Closes Session.

Brief reports from foreign delegates and from member societies in the United States were presented at last night's session of the third triennial conference of Associated Country Women of the World, with Lady Eleanor Cole, of Kenya Colony, East Africa, presiding.

The reports, presented in Constitution Hall before an audience of 4,500, reevaled that:

In Germany the Country Housewives Association, through an apprenticeship program of taking city girls for certain periods on the farms of members, has graduated thousands of youn g women as certified rural housekeepers after a two-year course.

In Ceylon the Association of Women's Institutes has established study groups among native Samiti and Singhales women on home economics subjects, including fine handicrafts from native products.

In Palestine the Women's International Zionist organizatoin assists new women settlers in becoming acquainted with conditions nad has laid out gardens in towns and surrounding colonies.

In Missouri the Home Economics Extension clubs have provided 7,040 school children with a hot dish at noon and have served lunches to 1,499 children who would have had no food except for this service.

In Virginia a similar organization canned 2,000 quarts of vegetables for school lunches and established recreational centers and camps for the use of all county organizations.

Last night's session closed with a film showing country women's organizations at work, holding demonstration groups, making pottery, weaving rugs, grading market products, beautifying their homes and the many other things that go to make up the modern rural housewife's existence.

Nationalities Are Mixed at Country Women's Conference

Farm Women Hear President

to the garden party—that co-operation must supplant individualism among farmers, as it has among other groups, the First Lady said:

"In the last analysis each and every one of us as individuals is responsible for what happens to our country. What is done here in Washington is the direct result of what you are, and of what you feel and do at home."

Secretary Wallace reminded his listeners that they, as women, make a more important contribution to farming than to any other single industry. He also pointed out that, according to present trends, the quantity and quality of our population will depend during the next generation or two on rural families.

Secretary of State Hull, emphasizing the international aspects of the conference, meeting for the first time on American soil, said:

"By carrying to your respective countries a better understanding of the essential community of interests between the peoples of the world, you can do much to help establish friendliness, understanding and fair dealing as a foundation for peaceful and mutually beneficial relations among nations."

At the close of the first session, presided over by Miss Grace Frysinger, chairman of the United States groups, and by Mrs. Alfred Watt, of Canada and England, president of the A. C. W. W. foreign delegates brought greetings from their countries, speaking in their own languages. The delegates from Ceylon and Latvia were in native costume.

In the hours preceding the afternoon meeting in Constitution Hall and following the garden party the thousands of visitors—more than 6,300 have actaully registered—made impromptu tours of the Capital.

Dressed for the most part in high fashion, they were consciously proud of being honest-to-goodness farm women.

"I can't help it whether I look like it or not," laughed an attractive young housewife from Ohio. "I milk cows every night and morning and do all the other work a farmer's wife has to do."

Once inside the gates the visitors crowded around the lemonade pavilions, strolled under the trees, sat on the grass and did their best to greet Mrs. Roosevelt and thank her personally for her hospitality. Only a few hundred actually got to the First Lady. She greeted all the foreign and official delegates, but after that the mob pressed around her so fiercely that she could only shake hands with those who had crowded to the front of the pack.

At the request of Mrs. Roosevelt, farm women's choruses from Indiana and Iowa joined in singing beneath the South Portico. The choruses sang separately at the meeting in Constitution Hall and the First Lady said at that time that she knew the President would like to hear them.

Aside from the singing there was no entertainment at the garden party and, because of the huge number entertained, the usual sandwiches, ices and cakes were omitted.

Program of Today's Events

10:00 a. m. to 11:00 a. m. — Constitution Hall. Community singing and Farm Women's Chorus, South Carolina. Presiding, Mrs. Godfrey Drage, Wales, vice president, Associated Country Women of the World. Five-minute reports from societies by delegates, continued: Burma, England, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Ireland, British East Africa, Scotland, Wales, and others.

11:00 a. m. to 1:00 p. m. — Secretary's report of three years of progress. Presentation of the treasurer's financial statement and balance sheet. Presidential address by Mrs. Alfred Watt. Reports of research and handicrafts committees, Associated Country Women of the World. Mrs. Roosevelt Maps Midwest Trip Next Week

To Join President's Tour After Attending Two Commencements.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt announced her vacation plans yesterday. She also announced that Sir Ernest Bain and Lady Bain and their daughter, Mrs. Noble, and Lady Reading, widow of the former Ambassador of Great Britain to this country would be guests at tea at the White House tomorrow. Lady Reading will stay overnight.

On Thursday Mrs. Roosevelt will go to New York to attend the Todhunter School Comencement Friday. She will go to Drake University in Iowa Saturday to make the commencement address. She hopes to catch up with President Roosevelt's Middle-Western tour next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she would like to go to the Dyess colony in Arkansas on her vacation. The colony is a share-croppers' community. Mrs. Roosevelt intends to accompany the President as far as Vincennes, Ind., where she will spend a day and two nights with her social secretary, Mrs. James Helm.

In order to attend the New London (Conn.) boat races between Harvard and Yale, Mrs. Roosevelt said she would be back in New York June 18 or 19. Her son, Franklin, jr., will row for Harvard.

From New London she will go to White Sulphur Springs, for the dinner of the Chi Omega Achievement Award Committee.

Mrs. Roosevelt announced her vacation plans just before a garden party on the White House lawn for 6,000 farm women attending the triennial convention of the Associated Country Women of the World.

Overdue Ship Bearing 25 Hunted by Plane

San Diego, Calif., June 1 (U.P.).—A Coast Guard amphibian airplane was sent late today to search for the fishing boat Wolfman, reported overdue at Long Beach, Calif., with 25 persons aboard.

Brief radio messages received at Coast Guard headquarters did not state how long the boat was overdue. It was assumed the vessel was one of the sport fishing fleet. A Coast Guard cutter was sent from San Pedro to aid in the search.

Caffery Leaves Cuba For U. S. by Airplane

He made no statements as to the reason for the trip, but it was understood it was merely a routine visit to the State Department.

OLD GOLD EXCHANGE—FOURTH FLOOR

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL in the Human Heart

Perhaps half the disappointments in the world are occasioned by people trying to get more than they pay for. Regardless of the laws of economics, the striving for a bargain is ceaseless. Yet, the dollar sign is the quality sign. You get what you pay for. La Salle, for instance, is a quality car—built to the highest Cadillac standards. It does not sell—and cannot sell—in the low-price field. Yet, day after day, people try to find La Salle quality in the price range below. Of course, they are disappointed. If you want La Salle style, beauty and quality, you must buy a La Salle. There is no substitute.
